By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Questioning the "justice" of the Supreme Court's action yesterday in ordering return of $200,000,000 of impounded processing taxes to manufacturers, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said today "the time has come when long-suffering patience calls for practical and immediate action by the Congress and the administration."

Wallace, speaking over a national radio network, declared that "the AAA is not dead, and, even more important, the farm sentiment which built up 14 years of strenuous fighting for equality to agriculture is not dead."

"I will admit to my Nebraska friend (Wallace referred to a letter concerning AAA he had read previously) that it seems to me that the time has come when long suffering patience calls for practical and immediate action by the Congress and the administration."

"Questions Justice, Not Legality." "I say this because of the news that processing tax collections impounded by the courts are now to be immediately returned to the producers. The Supreme Court so ordered yesterday this money, which was total nearly $200,000,000, representing taxes which had in most cases already been passed on to consumers or back to farmers."

"I do not question the legality of this action, but I certainly do question the justice of it."

"In its decision on the Hoosac mills case declaring the AAA unconstitutional the majority of the court expressed disapproval of the use of expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another. The return of this $200,000,000 to the processors is exactly that. The money was collected from the producers and consumers by the processors. It now goes by Supreme Court order, to enrich solely the processors."

Refers to Congress' Provision. "This decision of yesterday ignores the express and manifest provision of Congress that no refund of these taxes should be made to processors unless they could show that they themselves had paid the taxes and that they had not been passed on to consumers or producers. No such claim was made either by the Hoosac Mills or the rice millers."

As Wallace spoke, Attorney-General Cummings telegraphed all United States Attorneys to "do nothing further to hold status quo or to oppose return of funds impounded in processing tax injunction suits."

"If it is impossible," Wallace said, "to get justice for agriculture either under the Constitution of the United States or the rulings of the Supreme Court, as the case may be, the situation will become fully apparent in due time. In the meantime, within the limitations which may or may not have been imposed and about which there is some variety of opinion, we shall do the best we can for agriculture and the general welfare."

Reverses Think U. S. Supreme Court Reversed Itself. By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—President Roosevelt termed the Supreme Court's refusal of a rehearing in the rice millers' AAA processing tax case an apparent reversal of an earlier leading case in constitutional law, at his press conference today.

He said he discussed with administration leaders the implications of the court's action and their effect on a Federal law which states that no injunction shall be issued to restrain the collection of any tax.

House Adopts Resolution of "Profound Sorrow" at British Ruler's Death.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The House of Representatives adopted a resolution today expressing "profound sorrow" at the death of King George, and, without transacting any business, adjourned immediately in respect to the memory of the monarch.

The Senate was not in session today. House members and gallery occupants stood with heads bowed as the Rev. James Montgomery, the chaplain, offered a prayer and asked "The Lord God to comfort the people of his realm."

The resolution, offered by Chairman McReynolds of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said the House "has learned with profound sorrow of the death of his majesty George V, and sympathizes with his people in the loss of their beloved sovereign."

"I've paid taxes every year until four years ago," Farmer commented.

Milton F. Parke, 64½ Myrtle avenue, Wellston, will be among the first in St. Louis County to receive a pension check.

PASSAGE OF BONUS
BILL IN HOUSE SET FOR TOMORROW

Measure to Pay in Bonds, Approved by Senate, Expected to Be on President's Desk Thursday.

74-16 VOTE ENOUGH
TO OVERRIDE VETO

Balloting in Lower Branch Considered Merely Perfunctory Routine—Roll-call of Senators.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Democratic leaders in the House made plans today to speed the passage tomorrow of the Senate soldiers' bonus bill, approved yesterday by the upper legislative branch, 74 to 16.

Indications were that by Thursday morning the measure to pay more than $2,000,000,000 of adjustable service certificates in immediately redeemable $50 bonds would be on President Roosevelt's desk, provided the House makes no changes that require time to iron out.

The fact that the Senate vote was considerably more than the two-thirds necessary to override a veto strengthened predictions in Congress that the bill would become law whether President Roosevelt signed it or not. The House already has passed, 356 to 59, an immediate payment bill similar to the Senate measure except that it specifies no particular method of payment.

The bonus bill goes to the House as a Senate amendment to the measure approved in the House. Acceptance of a motion to concur in the Senate amendment is all that is needed to send the bill to President Roosevelt. Chairman Doughton (Dem.), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, is expected to make that motion immediately after the opening of tomorrow's session.

Question of Providing Cash.

Members of Congress, considering the House vote as merely perfunctory routine, turned to the next question: How to provide the necessary cash? When that question is presented for debate, inflation forces are expected to rally for another attempt to print new money. The ultimate cost of the Senate "bonus" bill is estimated at $2,491,000,000, but figures on the immediate cost range from $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000, depending on how many veterans choose to cash their bonds immediately. Beginning next June 15, veterans can turn their bonds into local postoffices for cash, or they can hold them and draw 3 per cent interest until 1945.

Bonus leaders are considering the possibility of taking an appropriation out of the independent offices supply bill, which has passed the House and is now in the Senate. Advocates of inflation, who conferred last yesterday in the office of Senator Thomas (Dem.) Oklahoma, indicated they would try to have the appropriation measure stipulate that instead of borrowing the money, the Treasury issue new currency against the gold and silver reserves.

Only One Amendment Accepted. Only nine Democrats and seven Republicans in the Senate voted against the bill. Fifty-six Democrats, 15 Republicans, two Farmer-Laborites and the lone Progressive, La Follette, voted in the affirmative.

Only one amendment to the bill as introduced in the Senate was approved. It provided for penalties of $1000 and five years' imprisonment for any fraud in obtaining the bonds. Application of the penalties to violators of regulations was stricken out on motion of Senator Borah, Idaho, who called that "too severe."

By 65 to 23, an amendment by Senator Neely (Dem.), West Virginia, to pay the soldier debt in new currency was rejected. A similar proposal by Senator Thomas (Dem.), Oklahoma, was defeated Saturday by a 64 to 27 vote.

An amendment by Senator King (Dem.), Utah, to pay only the cash surrender, or present, value of the certificates and thereby save the Treasury an estimated $1,200,000,000 was the only audible one.

A vote of 50 to 38 turned down a motion to reconsider previous rejection of an amendment by Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas. It would have extended bonus benefits to 2257 "provisional" First and Second Lieutenants who served in the regular army in the World War and resigned the first year after the armistice.

SANDRINGHAM, Jan. 21.—Great Britain's royal family mourned the death of 70-year-old King George V at a private service in Sandringham's little church today while the new King, Edward VIII, flew to London for his accession ceremony.

The sovereign died, as he had always wished, in the quiet and peace of his Norfolk country estate just before midnight last night, with the family at his side.

An official announcement said the Queen mother, Mary, was "bearing up with magnificent courage" today.

The Princess Royal, only daughter of King George and Queen Mary, and other members of the royal household went to Saint Mary of Magdalene's Church this morning for a holy communion service.

The service was conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who only a few hours before had given a last blessing to the dying King.

Workmen Guard Body. King George's body was removed tonight from Sandringham house to the little parish church. The body was taken on a hand bier escorted by a detachment of Grenadier Guards through sleet and rain. The King's piper played a wailing lament as the procession moved along the church walk. Members of the royal family made the journey by automobile.

Six workmen of the Sandringham estate carried the coffin from the death chamber to place it on the bier. They were dressed in corduroy breeches and leather jackets. The workmen themselves mounted guard over the body to stay there all through the night.

The widowed Queen Mary and her children, except for the new King Edward and the Dukes of York and Gloucester—all of whom are in London—awaited the arrival by the body on the church court. The parish rector conducted a short service, after which the family returned to Sandringham House for the night.

The coffin is of oak, fashioned in the workshops of the royal estate by men who served the dead King for years. The wood used is from trees felled on the Sandringham grounds several years ago.

Stanley Baldwin and Admiral Keyes Among Pallbearers for Services Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The body of Rudyard Kipling, poet and author, who died Saturday, was cremated last night at Golders Green, north of London. Only four persons were present, one of them representing the wife of the author.

There was no ceremony. Until 10 minutes before the coffin arrived from the hospital where Mr. Kipling died, executives of the crematorium were not aware the service was to take place. They had already closed the gates.

When Mr. Kipling is buried in Westminster Abbey Thursday he will have as pallbearers several of the most prominent men of the empire. The ashes will be placed in the poet's corner in a service attended by leaders of the political, military and literary branches of Britain's public life. Pallbearers for the Abbey service will be: Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, cousin of the bard; Admiral Sir Roger Keyes; Field Marshal Sir Archibald Montgomery-Massingberd (retired chief of the imperial general staff); Sir James Barrie, Scottish playwright; Major-General Sir Fabian Ware, vice-chairman of the Imperial War Graves Commission and authority on empire questions; H. A. Gwynne, editor of the Morning Post; A. B. Ramsay, master of Magdalene College, Cambridge; and A. S. Watt, Kipling's literary agent.

KING'S CLOCKS ON TIME AGAIN

SANDRINGHAM, England, Jan. 21.—The new King, Edward VIII, and his mother, the Dowager Queen Mary, ordered the clocks at Sandringham House set back one-half hour today to conform with standard time.

In the reign of King Edward VII, the clocks at Sandringham were set half an hour fast to help the King reach appointments on time.

Thousands Pray in London
After Death of the King

Steady Stream of Mourners at St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey—Special Service Held.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A steady stream of mourners filed in and out of St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey today to kneel and pray, following the death of King George.

St. Paul's was packed at a special memorial service at noon. The choir sang the Twenty-third Psalm. "Great Paul," the largest bell of the cathedral, which is tolled only on the death of a sovereign, was rung for two hours.

London theaters, music halls and cabarets were closed for the day. Hurst Park announced that the race meetings tomorrow and Thursday were called off. Greyhound races were canceled. An ice hockey match between the United States Olympic team and the Wembley Lions, scheduled for tonight, was postponed.

City in Mourning.

Crepe was on doorways and shop windows. Many shops kept their window blinds down, or were closed. A rush of orders for mourning apparel swamped West End stores. All courts were closed.

Great crowds, with the persons headed and talking quietly, massed outside Buckingham Palace. Many early workers wore black ties or arm bands.

Flags were at half-staff. The new King's Equerry, Sir John Laird, was the earliest arrival at St. James's Palace, going to prepare the palace for the oath of accession.

The British Broadcasting Co. suspended all broadcasts for the day, except for gale warnings and shipping forecasts.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Edward VIII—until yesterday the Prince of Wales—flew to London from Sandringham today to take up his new duties as ruler of the British Empire, and four hours after his arrival met the Privy Council in an ancient ceremony at St. James's Palace, making his declaration and receiving the oath of allegiance from the Councilors.

The Council, which was in session a little less than an hour, heard Edward intone this declaration:

"I, Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, do solemnly and sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant Reformed Church by law established in England, and that I shall, according to the true intent of enactments which secure the Protestant succession to the throne of my realm, uphold and maintain said enactments to the best of my powers, according to law."

An assemblage of more than 300 persons, including one woman, Margaret Bondfield, a Labor leader, were allowed to attend the ceremony.

Baldwin Heads Councilors.

Prime Minister Baldwin headed the arriving Councilors, whose automobiles blocked The Mall for a quarter of a mile. The Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, wearing levee dress and also mourning known as "weepers," mingled with the cockhatted, sworded and buckled gentlemen, heads and church dignitaries garbed in ecclesiastical purple.

The Privy Council drew up a proclamation declaring the former Prince of Wales to be the sovereign. In accordance with precedent, the new King then was conducted to an apartment adjoining the council chamber while the Councilors, the Lord Mayor of London and other civic dignitaries assembled.

The Lord Chamberlain, the Earl of Cromer, then made formal announcement to the Council of the facts of King George's death and the accession of his eldest son.

The Lord Chamberlain, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord Chancellor went to the new King's apartment to acquaint him with what had been done. The new King, entering the council chamber, delivered a short address, after which the proclamation of his accession was presented to be signed.

With his hand raised, the King swore an oath to guarantee the security of the Church of Scotland, curity of the Church of Scotland, and to give tomorrow morning.

The new title, King Edward VIII, was used for the first time tonight when Parliament met to swear allegiance to the King.

take the oath. He swore "allegiance to His Majesty, King Edward VIII, his heirs and successors, according to the law."

Then he signed the roll. The next to take the oath were Prime Minister Baldwin, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir John Simon, Home Secretary.

Flight From Sandringham.

The new King took off at 11:40 a. m. from the Berham, Newton, airport near Sandringham, in the 100-mile flight to London with the Duke of York, heir-presumptive to the throne. Edward's private pilot sat at the controls. He arrived at Hendon aerodrome at 12:15 and drove to York House, which was his official residence.

A big crowd was assembled at the aerodrome to see the new King. Because of the circumstances, there was no cheering. Men took off their hats and women curtsied.

Dense throngs lined St. James street and other thoroughfares leading to St. James's palace to watch Edward's first entrance as King. An incident showing the nervous strain under which the new King was laboring occurred when he stepped out of the royal car at St. James's Palace. Hatless, he walked briskly into the palace between the sentries who stood at "present arms." A moment later he hurried back to the automobile to get a package he had forgotten.

The guns in Hyde Park boomed dully across Whitehall as tens of thousands of spectators watched the king enter the palace grounds.

In mid-afternoon, Edward, his first visit as sovereign to Buckingham Palace.

The new King's first public note, issued at Buckingham Palace, read:

"The King commands that the court shall wear mourning for nine months from this day for his late Most Gracious Majesty, King George V, of blessed memory. The court is to change to half mourning, Tuesday, July 21, next."

Succession Automatic.

King George's death set into motion automatically the machinery carrying on the long line of English Kings. The elaborate traditional rituals and ceremonies with which Great Britain installs its sovereigns called the new King to London to meet the Privy Council for its oath of allegiance. Parliament was summoned this afternoon under the act requiring it to assemble after a monarch dies.

King George and Queen Mary received in the civil list—the parliamentary salary provision—a total of £470,000 (about $2,250,000 at present rates of exchange). This included a private purse of £110,000, provision for salaries and expenses of the royal household totaling £800, and £13,200 for royal bounty. In 1931 King George voluntarily accepted a reduction of £50,000 a year. It was restored last August.

King Edward rests will be made for a large King may not require so large a civil list as a married one.

Although the Prince of Wales immediately became King, precedent indicated he would not be crowned formally until after the long mourning period has closed. He is the first bachelor King since 1760.

Free to adopt any name he pleased, he indicated his choice when he affixed the one word "Edward" to a message to the Lord Mayor of London, communicating the news of his father's death. He had always signed as "Edward P." heretofore.

King George's second son, the 40-year-old Duke of York, became heir-presumptive. The Duke's 9-year-old daughter, Princess Elizabeth, became second in the line of succession to the throne. Following her in the line are the Duke of York's second daughter, Margaret Rose; the Duke of Gloucester, the Duke of Kent, and the latter's infant son, David.

Problems of Precedence.

The accession of the bachelor King created no new questions of precedence for the crown. There is now no Prince of Wales—no heir apparent. The Duke of York, second son of the late King and Queen Mary, as heir presumptive, cannot in the line of Prince of Wales and the principality must remain merged with the Crown unless the new King marries and produces an heir.

Queen Mary took the new role of Queen Mother after less than 12 hours as a member of the Council of State, set up in the last day of King George's life to relieve him of most of his royal duties before his death.

POET LAUREATE MASEFIELD PENS VERSES TO KING

Writes Tribute at Los Angeles When He Learns of Ruler's Death.

By the Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, Jan. 21.—John Masefield, poet laureate of England, who is visiting here, wrote these stanzas on learning of the death of King George:

This man was King in England's direst need;
In the black-battled years when hope was gone,
His courage was a flag, men rallied on;
His steadfast spirit showed him King indeed.

And when the war was ended, when the thought
Of revolution took its hideous place,
His courage and his kindness and his grace
Scattered (or charmed) its Ministers to naught.

No King, of all our many, has been proved
By time so savage to the thrones of Kings
Nor won more simple triumph over fate.

He was most royal among royal things,
Most thoughtful for the meanest in his state;
The best, the gentlest and the most beloved.

HEIR PRESUMPTIVE HAS TAKEN PLACE OF KING AT FUNCTIONS

Duke of York, Brother of New Monarch, Is Fond of Movies.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 21.—Prince Albert, Duke of York, carries to his new position of heir presumptive to the British throne an education rich in experiences of royalty. The second son of the late King George often has represented his father at official ceremonies and has substituted for his elder brother, now King Edward VIII, on state occasions.

Outraining their princely uncle, the Duke of York's two daughters—Elizabeth and Margaret Rose—stand next to their father in line of succession.

Albert is fond of cross word puzzles, homemade cocoa, and movies. He plays tennis well, rides to hounds and has a golf handicap of nine.

The Duke and Duchess of York have attempted, at the instance of Queen Mary, to bring up their daughters with a minimum of seclusion. The family is frequently observed in public together.

Elizabeth, 9 years old, considered the Queen mother's favorite grandchild, is also a favorite companion of "Uncle David," the new King.

The precedence of Elizabeth's claim to the throne over her sister was in doubt for some time until the late King definitely established it by royal proclamation.

ROOSEVELT, HULL SEND 'I REIGN BUT DO NOT RULE'—KING GEORGE

Express Condolences of U. S. on the Death of British King.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—President Roosevelt sent to the new King of England last night a message expressing sorrow at the death of King George V.

He also sent messages of condolence to Queen Mary and to the Governors-General of Australia, Dominion of Canada, Irish Free State, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa.

Secretary of State Hull sent messages of sympathy to the Prime Ministers of Great Britain and the dominions.

Text of Messages. In his cablegram addressed to "His Majesty the King, Sandringham Palace, Norfolk, England," President Roosevelt said:

"I, with deep sorrow that I learn of the death of His Majesty, your father, I send to you my profound sympathy and that of the people of the United States, in whose respect and affection he occupied a high and unique place. I had the privilege of knowing His Majesty during the war days, and his passing brings to me personally a special sorrow."

To Queen Mary, the President called:

"Mrs. Roosevelt and I extend to Your Majesty and to the members of your family our heartfelt sympathy and join you in mourning the loss of one whose high qualities of kindness and wisdom have been so powerful an influence for universal peace and justice."

At the White House it was announced that the annual congressional reception which was to have been held next Thursday evening had been postponed.

To Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, Hull called:

"I wish to express to you my sincere sympathy and that of the Government of the United States in the passing of His Majesty. The British people have lost a valiant leader and untiring worker for their welfare and happiness."

The missions here of Great Britain and the dominions canceled all social engagements, both official and those of individual members of their staffs.

The British Embassy was informed first of the King's death by news associations. A secretary who answered the telephone at the embassy said: "Thank you very much. It is a very sorrowful occasion."

Personal Calls by Hull. Formal condolences of the American Government were conveyed personally today by Secretary Hull to the representatives of the British Government and the dominions in Washington.

Before going to his office in the State Department, Hull drove up Massachusetts avenue to the red brick mansion which serves as the British Embassy. He was received immediately by Sir Ronald Lindsay, Ambassador of Great Britain. He then visited the dominions' legations.

In Piccadilly Circus. The thousands in Piccadilly Circus—where the theater district—did not know for more than a half hour that the King had died. Stamping their feet to keep up circulation, thousands milled about or stood silently under a huge electric bulletin board which flashed bits of news and gave the time.

The board stopped operating a few minutes before word of the death came from Sandringham.

At 12:25 a. m. there were only rumors, passed by word of mouth, but hundreds still stood by, hoping that when official word came it would be good instead of bad. The first newspaper extras were out at 12:32 a. m.

Orchestras Stop Playing. The music of hotel orchestras halted. Groups sang the national anthem, "God Save the King."

The extras had their columns heavily bordered in black. Pictures of the old and new Kings appeared side by side, with many pages devoted to the dead King's life and reign.

At Windsor Castle, the standard which flies from the Round Tower which is lowered only on the death of the sovereign was let down by the royal flagman.

When the news reached London's East End, rabbis called their congregations together and prayers were recited in the synagogues. The Admiralty ordered all ships in home waters to fire a salute of 70 guns—one for each of King George's years.

The army and navy went into mourning, and England awaited instructions for the year's period of sorrow generally observed at the death of a ruler.

A flood of telegrams and cablegrams expressing condolences on the death of King George, necessitated a greatly augmented staff in the central telegraph office. Additional lines were installed to Sandringham House and these were taxed to the utmost. Hundreds of messages came from the United States and thousands more from the British Empire.

James M. Beck Recalls Remark of British Monarch During Chat in 1920.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—James M. Beck, former United States Solicitor-General and Congressman, recalled today that King George of England told him in 1920 when European monarchies were toppling:

"I do not think the waves of revolution will reach my throne, for—thank God—I reign but I do not rule."

Beck said this remark was his most vivid recollection of an hour's private chat. In that chat, Beck said, King George disclosed interesting sidelights on figures of history, including Edward M. House, wartime adviser of Woodrow Wilson.

"For example," said Beck, "he told me that Col. House, as the super-Ambassador of the United States, suggested to the King that he would like to meet me privately so that the public would never know the fact. As a result, it was arranged that Col. House, whenever he desired to see the King, should come through the stables of Buckingham Palace and the King would meet him in the gardens."

"On the day after the sinking of the Lusitania, Col. House asked for an interview and as usual met him under the trees of the palace garden."

"Col. House's first words were: 'The United States will be in the war within 48 hours' and the King smilingly offered to bet the Colonel that such would not be the case."

The United States did not declare war until two years later.

King George's remark that "I reign but do not rule," Beck said, was made at a time when "Bolshevik armies were at the gates of Warsaw" and other European nations were uncertain whether to give aid.

"Commenting on these events," said Beck, "the King expressed judgment that at that hour, when the fate of Poland had not yet been finally determined, it was an even question whether all of Western Europe would not follow the example of Russia by overthrowing existing institutions and enthroning the proletariat."

"Radical" in the sense of the word used by the Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., in the third of his series of four talks yesterday afternoon and last night at St. Louis University Auditorium. Next Monday he will speak on "The Christ of the Future."

Father Lord said that acceptance of the doctrine of "union in the mystical body of Christ" would mean a united world. "Beyond personal desires," he said, "would be care for the fellow members of the mystical body of Christ. Human relationships would take on a basic significance beyond self-interest. Humanitarianism, now meaningless, would get a real meaning. We could experience patriotism, love and gratitude toward our own country, without nationalism, or hatred of other countries. While still enjoying those like myself in tastes, temperament and training, I would not dislike, or inure, or deprive of their just rights, those for whom I have no natural inclination."

He maintained that "Christ was the most radical revolutionary in history," and that "a Christian who understands and follows the religion of Christ is the greatest living radical."

FORMER KAISER TELEGRAPHS CONDOLENCES TO QUEEN MARY

Cousin of King George V Wires From Doorn That 'Great Loss' Deeply Affects Him.

DOORN, The Netherlands, Jan. 21.—The former Kaiser of Germany, a cousin of the late King George V of England, telegraphed today to the bereaved Queen Mary at Sandringham:

"I am deeply affected by the tragic loss you and the royal family have to deplore. I beg you to accept the warmest sympathy of Herminie, myself and all members of my house."

(Signed) WILLIAM. The former Kaiser was awakened shortly after midnight to be told of the death of the King who like himself was a grandson of Queen Victoria of Britain.

(Queen Victoria's son, King Edward VII, was George's father; the Princess Victoria, one of her daughters, was the former Kaiser's mother.)

ROOSEVELT CANCELS LUNCHEON

Also Postpones Congressional Reception Set for Thursday.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—A formal luncheon at the White House today, at which Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, was to have been honor guest, was canceled as a note of respect to the death of King George.

The congressional reception, to which all Governors and their wives had been invited, was postponed from Thursday night to Feb. 10 for the same reason. Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference that the President had known the King and wished to express his grief by delaying the reception.

FOREIGN COMMENT ON RULER'S DEATH

Tribute to New King in Berlin Papers—Hitler Sends Sympathy.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, Jan. 21.—Special editions of Berlin newspapers were issued today after the death of King George V, although the regular morning newspapers had appeared before he died.

The extra editions stressed the serious task confronting his successor and paid warm tribute to the new King.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler, who was in Berlin, was immediately informed of King George's death. Hitler telegraphed the new King, saying:

"The sad news of King George's demise grieves me deeply. I beg Your Majesty to accept my and the German Government's sincere condolences with assurances of heartfelt sympathy of the whole German people at the heavy loss sustained by the Royal House of the British nation."

Hitler also telegraphed condolences to Queen Mary.

The Boerse-Zeitung paid tribute to King George for "having done everything for the World War in his power to cleanse the poisoned atmosphere between England and Germany."

Konstantin von Neurath, Foreign Minister, will head the representatives of Germany at the funeral of King George.

Japanese Court to Observe Three Weeks' Mourning.

TOKYO, Jan. 21.—The Imperial household announced today that the Emperor's Court would observe three weeks' official mourning for King George.

Mussolini Sends Condolences; Italian Court in Mourning.

ROME, Jan. 21.—Premier Mussolini told Premier Stanley Baldwin of England today that the "Italian people heard with profound emotion the announcement of the death of King George V and sympathized deeply with the mourning British nation."

Telegrams of condolence were drafted and flags on Government buildings were ordered lowered to half-staff.

Cardinal Pacelli, Secretary of State of the Vatican City, carried the Pope's condolences to the British legation. Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Fulvio Sforza, and Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador in London, presented official condolences.

French Diplomatic Ball Postponed; Lebrun Sends Message to Queen.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—President Albert Lebrun announced postponement of the diplomatic ball tomorrow and flags on all public buildings and embassies were lowered to half-staff on receipt of news of King George's death.

President Lebrun sent the following message to Queen Mary of England:

"In the great grief which strikes Your Majesty so cruelly I wish to assure you I very sincerely share your bereavement and ask you to accept an expression of my respectful, sorrowful sympathy."

"It is with deep emotion I learned of the death of His Majesty King George V," the French President telegraphed the new British King.

"I send you an expression of my profound sympathy in associating myself with your mourning."

"The feelings which your august father showed for France, in the imperishable memory of glorious events which under his reign united the two people will remain in our memory. With sincere sympathy the French nation shares the great grief which the loss of the well-beloved sovereign causes the people of the British Empire."

3 More Nations Vote for Hudson.

GENEVA, Jan. 21.—Three more nations, Norway, Czechoslovakia and Poland, nominated Dr. Manley O. Hudson, Harvard University professor, yesterday to be a member of the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague. Previously he had been endorsed by China, Finland and Spain.

PUBLIC HEARING ON RIVERFRONT BONDS NEXT STEP

Only Remaining Suit Thrown Out But Start on $30,000,000 Memorial Still Is Not in Sight.

ALDERMEN TO HOLD SESSION TUESDAY

Municipal Auditorium to Be Used by Committee Considering Bill for Sale of Part of Issue.

Although Circuit Judge Granville Hogan yesterday dismissed the only suit that was on file against the $30,000,000 riverfront Jefferson Memorial project, prospects for an early start of the work were uncertain today.

Chairman Nick Reidy of the Aldermanic Ways and Means Committee announced today a public hearing would be held at 1 p. m. next Tuesday in the Municipal Auditorium on the bill to authorize sale of $25,000 bonds by the city to be used to start the project.

City's Demurrer Upheld. The suit dismissed by Judge Hogan was that filed by Harry L. Rothschiager, 5917 South Kingshighway, asking for an injunction. The court upheld the city's contention in a demurrer that the petition did not state a cause of action. The suit was filed Jan. 2.

An earlier suit, similar in some respects, was dismissed last Dec. 30 by Circuit Judge Frank C. O'Malley on the same grounds. The plaintiff in that suit, Edward Coleman, filed an amended petition after the dismissal, but later withdrew it and voluntarily dropped the action.

Rothschlager said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he probably would attempt to have his suit reinstated by filing an amended petition. He contends the project is not to be carried out under the national park system as was understood when the city voted $7,500,000 in bonds as its contribution to the cost of the memorial, but is being planned under an act for the preservation of historic sites passed by Congress last year. He asserted that under the historic sites act the Government could not acquire the property of religious or educational institutions without the consent of the owners and that consent has not been given for acquisition of the Old Cathedral and the Old Courthouse.

Opposition Among Aldermen. Although Mayor Dickmann urged speedy action on the bill to authorize sale of $25,000 bonds by the city to start the memorial project, he said today that he would not have considered a public hearing necessary except that in his opinion the present proposal is not exactly the same as that for which the people voted. Alderman Otto Lietchen, Third Ward, whose district is lukewarm toward the proposal, but has indicated that he would vote for the bill to sell the bonds, said the other two committee members, Ward, and Walter H. Toberman, Fourteenth, are for the bill, aligned with the Dickmann faction.

Aldermen Reidy, Routledge, Gummels, Slay and Lietchen are aligned with the group antagonistic to the bill. Dickmann and it is thought that they may delay action on the bond bill but eventually will join with other members of the Ways and Means Committee to recommend it for passage.

If the committee seeks to kill the bill by recommending that it be filed, the Board could call it up for passage by a majority vote of the members present, but enactment would require a majority vote of the entire board, or 15 favorable votes. Five members, Lietchen, Routledge, John A. Genteman, First Ward, Arthur E. Pahl, Twenty-fourth, and Michael J. Scott, Twenty-first, are in Florida on vacation.

On Trial for Murder

ALDERMEN SUSTAIN VETO OF CUT IN AUTO TAG FEES

Unanimous Action Taken With Factions Split 15 to 8 and Six Aldermen Absent.

A veto by Mayor Dickmann of a bill to reduce city automobile license fees was sustained unanimously by the Board of Aldermen today, with 15 members of the anti-Dickmann faction and eight of the pro-Dickmann group present and six Aldermen absent. It would have required 20 votes to override the veto, but the opposition to the Mayor has never exceeded 17. The bill, sponsored by Alderman Otto Lietchen, one of the absentees, who has been generally opposed to Dickmann, was passed last Tuesday by a factional vote of 17 to 12. The Mayor's veto message called attention to the loss of revenue to the city under the proposal, which has been estimated at $200,000 a year, and the comparatively small saving to automobile owners, for most of whom the reduction would have been about $2 a year.

Alderman Gregory V. Murray introduced a bill to increase the tax on wrestling matches from 5 to 10 per cent of the gross receipts, which would yield a few thousand dollars additional annually. Alderman Walter Ziegenbalg introduced a bill to require use of red globes on street lamps at street intersections, as a safety measure. The board, five of whose members have gone to Florida, adjourned to Jan. 31.

COLISEUM OFFERED TO CITY FOR ARMY; PRICE $200,000

Proposal Presented to Board of Estimate by George Kempland, Real Estate Dealer.

An offer to sell the Coliseum, 2608 Washington boulevard, to the city for $200,000, for an armory for the 138th Infantry of the National Guard, was made to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment today by George Kempland, a real estate dealer. The board authorized Deputy Comptroller Charles L. Cunningham to consult with Col. L. C. Kingland, new commander of the regiment, about the proposal.

A bond issue of $1,000,000 was voted for an armory in 1924. The Board of Estimate conferred today with representatives of downtown property and civic interests, seeking action on the old proposal to lift vehicle tolls from Eads Bridge. Mayor Dickmann told reporters that he was referred to Henry Miller, president of the Terminal Railroad, which controls the bridge.

FOUR IN FAMILY KILLED BY GAS

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 21.—Illuminating gas killed Hans Fiedler, 40 years old, and his three young children today in their small, tightly-sealed apartment, and left Mrs. Fiedler close to death.

All the kitchen gas jets were found open, and the cracks and keyholes of the apartment were stuffed with wadding, police said. The Fiedler four-room apartment was over a tavern Fiedler owned.

Frank Will Suit Retrial Denied.

The motion of Mrs. Esther Ann Hansel, 20 Lewis place, for a new trial in her $39,000 suit against the estate of Nathan Frank, late mayor and capitalist, was overruled yesterday by Circuit Judge Ryan.

A jury last month decided the suit in favor of the estate. Mrs. Hansel sued for the recovery of money she alleged Frank invested for her.

DEATH PENALTY SOUGHT AT TRIAL OF "SPOT" REAGAN

Eye-Witnesses Tell of Shooting of Clifford Apple After Row Over Playing Catch in Yard.

Taking of testimony in the trial of John J. (Spot) Reagan, former professional bondsman and saloon-keeper, charged with first degree murder in the killing of Clifford Apple, began today before a jury in Circuit Judge Douglas' court.

In his opening statement to the jury, selection of which was completed at 11:40 a. m., Assistant Circuit Attorney John L. Sullivan asked for the death penalty.

The first witness was Dr. D. L. Harris, coroner's physician who performed an autopsy on the body of Apple. He attributed death to a bullet wound near the heart. On cross-examination he said the body bore no other wounds or abrasions.

Eye-Witness Testifies.

Mrs. Florence Wright, 7316 Myrtle avenue, Maplewood, who lived at 4357 Maryland avenue in a four-family apartment building owned by Reagan at the time of the shooting, May 11, 1933, gave an eyewitness account as a State witness. Reagan lived in a similar building next door at 4353 Maryland, also owned by him.

Apple, 34-year-old salesman, who lived at 4138 Newberry terrace, was playing catch with the young son of one of Reagan's neighbors after returning with the boy from the funeral of his father, John Dryden.

Mrs. Wright recalled she was baking a cake when she heard Reagan shout at the players angrily, telling them to leave the back yard of the apartment in which she lived.

Apple, she testified, replied that Reagan was "a poor sport," and told him "you don't need to be so hard about it."

Saw Pistol in Hand.

When the game was resumed in the alley, Mrs. Wright said, Reagan left the house, holding his left hand in his coat pocket, and confronted Apple. She saw them grapple and heard the report of a shot after seeing a pistol in Reagan's upraised hand as he struggled with Apple.

She said she could not hear the conversation in the alley.

Mrs. Velma Hendryx, who now lives in Harrisonville, Mo., but lived at the time of the shooting lived at 4367 Maryland avenue, two doors west of Reagan's apartment building, testified she saw Apple, Robert E. Dryden and another youth, Emerson Payne, playing ball in the lot back of the apartment building.

She watched them and Reagan walk toward the alley, she said, then Reagan raised his hand, with "something bright in it," above his head. "I saw Mr. Reagan shoot Mr. Apple," she said.

Mr. Apple fell to his knees and Reagan turned around and walked away. She said she saw no weapon in Apple's hands.

Asked if she saw Reagan in the courtroom, she said she did not, apparently not recognizing the defendant, who has grown stouter since the shooting.

Her story supported the statement obtained by police from Apple before his death. Other witnesses reported that Apple was shot after he had been struck on the head with the pistol and knocked down.

Miss Eleanor Cluse, Brantwood, Wis., who lived at 4361 Maryland avenue at the time Apple was shot, gave testimony similar to Mrs. Wright's. She told of hearing Reagan order Apple and the boy from the yard back of the apartment at 4357 Maryland. She quoted Apple as telling Reagan he "didn't need to get so hard about it."

After the game had been resumed in the alley, she said, Reagan approached Apple, holding "something dark" in his hand. A moment later a shot was fired and she saw Apple on the ground.

Arrested Two Years Later. The arrest of Reagan, who disappeared after shooting Apple, was one of three major objectives of Police McCarthy set for the Police Department at the beginning of 1935. The arrest was made last June 5 at Kansas City after Reagan had been traced from Denver, where he had operated a sight-seeing travel bureau for a time.

Reagan, who is 50 years old, at one time was active in Sixth Ward Democratic politics. He once was sentenced to the Workhouse for malicious trespassing, to which he was permitted to plead guilty after he had been charged with burglary. Again, when charged with carrying a concealed weapon, he was sentenced to the Workhouse, but Gov. Gardner commuted the sentence to a fine. At the time of the Apple killing he was under bond on complaint of a woman that he fired through the door of her home when she refused him admittance.

70 PUBLIC WORKS PROJECTS UNDER WAY IN MISSOURI

Total Cost Estimated at $59,862,000; 79 Others Completed Since 1933.

A total of 70 Federal Public Works improvements, with a total estimated cost of $59,862,041, is now under construction in Missouri, W. M. Spann, Acting State Director of PWA for Missouri, announced today. Seventy-nine other improvements have been completed since the PWA program was started in 1933, he said.

On the work now under construction, contracts totaling $21,105,334 have been let to date. Included in the work started within the last week in St. Louis were the construction of additional comfort stations in city parks and additions and improvements to the city's elementary institutions, the former project to cost $117,777 and the latter $38,942.

PWA improvements in outstate Missouri, started within the last week, include additions and repairs to buildings at the University of Missouri, Columbia, $274,190; additional public sewers at Savannah, $98,724; municipal waterworks at Parma, $34,929, and highway work in Saline County, $93,454.

Two Boys, Each 15, Indicted for Murder in Edwardsville.

Accused of Killing John C. Higgins, Nov. 26, in Attempted Burglary.

An indictment charging Everett Rambo and James Jarrett, 15-year-old Edwardsville boys, with first degree murder for the fatal shooting Nov. 26 of John C. Higgins in an attempted burglary of his home at Edwardsville, was returned by a Madison County grand jury yesterday. Higgins was shot through the heart when he overtook one of the burglars fleeing from the house.

The boys, who have been in jail since their arrest the day following the shooting, both made statements, according to States Attorney M. L. Geers, in which they admitted their guilt, agreeing that Rambo fired the fatal shot. Jarrett later repudiated his alleged confession.

Rambo is the adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jarrett. It is expected the case will be set for trial next month.

SPEAKERS DISCUSS ADMINISTRATION OF SECURITY ACT

Head of American Public Welfare Association Suggests One Department Handle All Phases.

URGES ADVISORY BOARD OF CITIZENS

Mrs. Ralph W. Thayer Tells of Campaign and Need for Establishing Merit System.

The first of a series of institutes on the National Security Act to be conducted throughout the State by the Missouri Association for Social Welfare and other civic organizations ended last night at the Claridge Hotel, where speakers discussed the need for a trained personnel, selected without regard to political considerations, to administer the act.

The complex provisions of the act, including unemployment compensation, old age benefits, annuities and grants in aid to the states for various welfare activities, were discussed at other sessions of the institute, which began Sunday. In several particulars, it was pointed out, it will be necessary ultimately for Missouri to amend its laws to qualify for full participation in the operation of the act.

Fred K. Hoehler of Cincinnati, executive director of the American Public Welfare Association, who spoke last night, said the Social Security Act did not give the Social Security Board control over state and local administrators, and warned that the whole program might be deplored if the suggestions of the board regarding administration and personnel were not heeded.

Hoehler's Recommendation. Hoehler urged that the State should establish one public welfare department to administer all phases of the social security program. The head of this department, he said, should be appointed by the Governor, and the department should have an advisory board of citizens with overlapping terms.

Mrs. Ralph W. Thayer, chairman of the child welfare department of the League of Women Voters, told of the campaign of that organization for establishment of the merit system in public service. She said "one of the so-called crookedest politicians in St. Louis" had told her he would "go down the line" with the League on that question because every time he made a political appointment he made 399 enemies among those who did not get the job.

Peter Kasius, director of United Relief, Inc., suggested at the afternoon meeting that the Missouri requirement for old age pensions, fixing the minimum eligible age as 70, had been approved temporarily by the Social Security Board, but eventually would have to be reduced to 65 to conform with the Federal law.

Father Husslein Speaks. The Rev. Joseph Husslein, S. J., dean of the School of Social Service of St. Louis University, who spoke of the annuity feature of the Social Security Act, said he thought most persons did not realize the magnitude of this provision.

When this plan is in operation, Father Husslein said, half of the working population of the country will be under a Government operated insurance system which will assure them of annuities ranging from $15 to $35 a month when they have reached the age of 65.

Certain classes of workers, such as those in agriculture, domestic service, the professions, and casual labor will not participate in this phase of the plan. Those who do participate will pay 3 per cent of their earnings annually, an other employers will pay an additional 3 per cent. The annuities, based on the amounts of these payments, will be paid without reference to the need of the persons who will receive them.

About Child Welfare. Miss Agnes K. Hanna of the United States Children's Bureau, said Missouri had submitted no plan to the Social Security Board for participation in the funds to be made available to the states for child welfare work. Dr. E. K. Munson, epidemiologist for the State Department of Health, told of its plans to expand the health services of the State with the aid of funds to be secured from the Social Security Board.

Mrs. Mary E. Ryder, director of the Missouri Commission for the Blind, said Missouri was fortunate in that it was prepared to take advantage of the Federal assistance toward pensions for the blind offered in the Social Security Act. There have been pensions for the blind in Missouri for many years, she pointed out. Mrs. Ryder suggested the possibility that the 10-year residence requirement for such pensions would have to be reduced to five years to conform with the Social Security Act.

SCHOOLBOY KILLED BY MO. PAC. TRAIN

Arthur Pohlmann, 15, Tries to Hop Aboard but Slips and Falls.

Arthur Pohlmann, 15-year-old ninth-grade pupil at Wade School, was killed today when run over by a Missouri Pacific freight train on Oak Hill tracks between McKee avenue and De Tonty street.

William Kaltenbach, one of three schoolmates accompanying the Pohlmann boy, said they were taking a short cut to school by walking along the tracks. The train, operated by a switch engine, approached and the others stepped aside, Kaltenbach said. Arthur, apparently in fun, hopped on the fourth car, but lost his footing. After hanging on by his hands for 100 feet, his grip gave way and he fell under the wheels.

The accident occurred about four blocks north of the school, which is at 2030 South Vandeventer avenue. Arthur was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Pohlmann, 4460 Chouteau avenue. He had attended Wade School since last September, following graduation from St. Cronan's Catholic School.

CONVICT WITHOUT A COUNTRY MEETS BRIDE FOR FIRST TIME

They Greet Each Other at Ellis Island; to Be Married at Sea on Way to Holland.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. — Miss Emma Callmeyer, New York domestic, and Lawardus Borgart, recently-freed Federal convict and a man without a country, met for the first time today at Ellis Island. For Borgart, who had lost his Dutch and American citizenship, it was the end of 12 years of waiting for a bride. The woman had known her intended bridegroom only by photographs. They expect to be married on the high seas after they sail for the Netherlands tomorrow aboard the President Roosevelt.

Borgart, an inmate of Leavenworth penitentiary for 14 years, had paced the halls of Ellis Island for almost 24 hours before the woman appeared. She left her park avenue address last night, and this morning boarded a ferry near Battery Park to meet the man for whom she will renounce her American citizenship. In Holland they expect to set up a business with money she had saved against the hour of his release. Borgart was sent to Leavenworth for attacking a nurse when he was a private in the United States army.

BIDS FEB. 21 ON PIPE LINE TO STACEY PARK RESERVOIR

Board of Public Service Will Receive Estimates on New Hospital Wing Feb. 25.

The Board of Public Service today set Feb. 21 as the date on which it will receive bids for construction of a new water pipe line, about eight miles in length, from the Howard's Bend plant to Stacey Park reservoir. The pipe line will cost $200,000, of which 30 per cent, or $60,000, will be financed by a Federal PWA grant.

The Board also set Feb. 25 as the date on which bids will be received for construction of a new wing for Negro tubercular patients at Koch Hospital, estimated to cost $300,000, of which 30 per cent or $90,000 will be a PWA grant and the balance from a $2,000,000 bond issue, voted in 1933, for additional hospital facilities for Negroes. The new building will be a three-story brick structure housing 110 patients.

HOPE THAT ONE OF EIGHT TRAPPED IN MINE IS ALIVE

Colorado Rescue Crews Increase Efforts; Five Bodies Recovered After Explosion.

By the Associated Press. LOUISVILLE, Colo., Jan. 21. — Indication that at least one of eight men trapped by an explosion yesterday in the Monarch coal mine may be alive spurred rescue crews in their efforts today to reach the miners. Five bodies have been recovered.

The workers said indications were that Steve Davis, fire boss, was at a far end of a mine tunnel, two miles from a main shaft. They think he may have barricaded himself safely from gas in a coal room. Three of the five bodies were found near a wrecked mine motor car. Sheriff George Richart of Boulder said it was possible two cars collided at a tunnel intersection, possibly causing sparks which set off the explosion of gas. A second motor car, known to have been ridden by Joe Jaramillo, mule driver, was sought under debris at the intersection.

Two bodies, those of Kester Novinger and Leland Ward, were found 4000 feet from the main shaft. Tom Stevens, Ray Bailey and Oscar Baird were found dead near the wrecked motor car.

Mother Found Shot to Death. CHICAGO, Jan. 21. — Mrs. Carmen Grantelli, 32 years old, mother of three children, was found shot to death in a chair in her apartment today under circumstances police said indicated she had been murdered. Building records listed Mrs. Grantelli as a widow, on relief. Her three sons were in school.

NO CHARITY REQUESTS IN MOST BIG ESTATES

Survey Made of Largest Properties Handled Through St. Louis Probate Court.

Analysis of 197 of the largest estates administered through the St. Louis Probate Court in the 10 years prior to 1932 showed no requests for philanthropy in nearly three-fourths of the total, according to a report in the current issue of Social Studies, published by the Community Council.

The group of 145 estates in which there were no philanthropic bequests included six of the nine largest estates, each worth "upward of $200,000."

The average value of the 197 estates was $500,000, and the average bequest to charity was 2 per cent of that amount. The total percentage bequeathed to philanthropy was increased to 3.9 by one large estate, 91 per cent of which was left for that purpose.

These figures were taken from a thesis on private philanthropy as an equalizing factor in the distribution of wealth, prepared by a Washington University student in partial fulfillment of the requirements for a master of arts degree.

Family heirs received 79.1 per cent of the total worth of the estates, according to the study; 10.3 per cent went for administration and debts; 6.7 per cent for taxes, and 3.9 per cent for philanthropy.

Of the total bequeathed to philanthropy, 49.6 per cent was for educational purposes; 30 per cent for religious groups; 11.8 per cent for "social" purposes, and 8.6 per cent for health purposes.

The Community Council publication, in its account of the study, pointed out that taxes took nearly twice the total given to philanthropy, thus being virtually twice as effective in the raising of public funds for public purposes.

"Depression," the article continued, "has undoubtedly made heavy demands on philanthropy for decades to come," the article continued. "It is up to the social consciousness of the wealthy at the community whether these demands will be met by voluntary or compulsory philanthropy."

AWARD FOR PULLING MEN OUT OF BURNING AIRPLANE

Army Lieutenant Named Winner of Cheney Prize for Heroism.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — For heroism in the rescue of two men from a burning airplane at Dayton, O., last October, First Lieutenant Robert K. Giovannoli of Lexington, Ky., will receive the Cheney award for 1935.

The award is made each year to the officer or enlisted man of the army air corps or the air corps reserve performing the outstanding act of valor, extreme fortitude or self-sacrifice in a humanitarian interest in connection with flying.

Lieut. Giovannoli pulled the men out of the cockpit after the plane had crashed during a test flight. Both, however, were so severely injured that they died. They were Maj. Plover P. Hill, the pilot, and Leslie Tower, a civilian test pilot.

The award is made annually by Mrs. Mary L. Schofield of Peterboro, N. H., and Mrs. Thomas W. Streeter of Morristown, N. J., mother and sister of Lieut. William H. Cheney of the air service, who was killed in Italy in 1918. It consists of a plaque, a certificate of award and a cash prize.

$131,899 WPA GRANT FOR E. ST. LOUIS PARKS

Initial Allotment for Improvement and Development Announced—$764,356 Requested

An initial allocation of $131,899 in Works Progress Administration funds to the East St. Louis Park Board for improvement and development of East St. Louis parks and playgrounds was announced yesterday by Fred G. Austin, WPA administrator.

Application to the WPA requested $764,356 for the undertaking, to be supplemented by $92,110 contributed by the Park Board. Additional amounts will be released as they are needed to continue work, the initial allotment being made to get the work under way, Austin said. Of the total to be expended, totaling $856,475, about $666,162 will go for labor and $190,313 for materials.

Specifications submitted with the application call for employment of 1025 men for a year. At least 90 per cent of these must be taken from the St. Clair County relief rolls and paid the prevailing county rate of pay, ranging from $52 for unskilled laborers to $83 for professional and technical workers. The work will be largely hand labor, employing 898 men of the unskilled class.

Work in 12 Parks. Rehabilitation work will be done on 12 parks, namely, Bluff, Cannady, Emerson, Jones, Lincoln, North Boulevard, Oak, Olivette, Virginia, Pittsburgh Drive and Jones. Lake Park, a 1130-acre weed-grown tract on the southeastern outskirts of East St. Louis, will get the bulk of the funds for its development.

Work on the various parks consists of construction of walks, boulevards, lawn areas, bridal paths, parking areas and athletic fields; renovation of present lawns, shrubbery and garden beds; reconstruction of Jones park swimming pool fences and tennis courts; sloping of shores and embankments; treatment of trees and shrubs; laying of drainage and watering systems, and clearing, grubbing and landscaping of new park areas.

Three supplementary WPA projects for development of Lake park have previously been approved, but have been held up pending the allocation made yesterday. Federal funds allocated on these undertakings total $44,887, and the Park Board's contribution, $21,013. Calling for employment of 187 men from county relief rolls, the work consists of building bridges, docks, shelters and tennis courts and landscaping the island in the largest of the three lakes.

$660,000 Bond Issue. The Park Board has issued $660,000 in bonds to cover the Park Board's contributions, aggregating $113,123 for the four items. Emmett P. Griffin, Park Superintendent, said funds remaining after WPA costs had been paid would be utilized in repaying a $275,000 PWA loan, representing 55 per cent of $500,000 requested from the PWA to finance additional developments on Lake Park, and in carrying out an independent improvement program.

WOODLAWN COUNTRY CLUB TO BE SOLD AT AUCTION

Purpose Is to Satisfy Debt of $61,000, Secured by Mortgage.

The Woodlawn Country Club, formerly the Kirkwood Country Club, Woodlawn and Kirkwood avenues, Kirkwood, will be sold at public auction Feb. 4 at the Courthouse in Clayton to satisfy an indebtedness of $61,000 in notes, secured by a mortgage. The First National Bank, successor trustee, will conduct the sale.

According to Albert Theis Jr., secretary of a group of holders of the notes, 96 per cent of the holders requested the action. Some of the notes, he said, have been in default since January, 1933, along with taxes and interest on the property, which consists of 81 acres of ground, a frame clubhouse and six tennis courts.

AGAINST FORMING NEW PARTY BASED ON TOWNSEND PARTY

Steering Committee in House Reports Such Action Would Be "Unwise."

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — Formation of a new political party based on the Townsend old-age pension program was termed "unwise" by the House "Townsend Steering Committee" last night.

Dr. F. E. Townsend, sponsor of the pension program, attended the meeting. He has indicated he would like to see the formation of a third party based on his proposal but his supporters in Congress think their greatest strength lies in votes from adherents of both political parties who will cast their ballots for candidates pledged to the Townsend pension plan.

Jeffie Hall, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues.

The third annual meeting of the St. Louis Christian Youth Conference will be held Feb. 14, 15 and 16 in Bishop Tuttle Memorial, Thirteenth and Locust streets. Bishop J. A. Gregg of the Methodist Episcopal church, Kansas City, and Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, will speak.

Mission day will be observed at Ursuline Academy, 800 East Monroe avenue, Kirkwood, all day Friday, beginning with solemn high mass at 9 a. m.

REIGN OF GEORGE V IN WORLD WAR AND YEARS OF THE DEPRESSION; CAREER OF EDWARD VIII, HIS SUCCESSOR, FIRST BACHELOR KING SINCE 1760

Ruler Tried to Avert Conflict,
But, Failing in This, Called on Empire to Fight to Finish

Ascended Throne on May 6, 1910, Succeeding Edward VII—His Problems in India and Ireland.

KING GEORGE V ascended the British throne on May 6, 1910, on the death of his father, King Edward VII, thus being the ruler of the Empire during the important period before and during the World War and during the perilous days of the great depression.

Because George's eldest son was not yet 16, a regency act was passed in which his consort, Queen Mary, was nominated to become regent in event of the King's death while his heir was under age.

When the sailor prince ascended the throne he became "George V," by the Grace of God of Great Britain, Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

The immediate heritage from his father's reign was a constitutional crisis, precipitated by the rejection of David Lloyd George's 1909 budget by the House of Lords.

With the new monarch's coronation over, Herbert Asquith, then Prime Minister, announced that he had obtained from the King a definite assent to use the royal prerogative for creating enough peers to insure passage of a parliament bill depriving the lords of their power on money bills and, under certain conditions, other public legislation.

Threat of the royal prerogative proved sufficient for enactment of the bill and the political significance of the incident on the constitutional position of the crown as a force above domestic party strife was marked.

The coronation ceremony, held June 22, 1911, in Westminster Abbey, contained a notable departure from precedent. George V took an amended oath, clipping from the centuries-old words the statement that he would defend the faith of his subjects.

The public assumption of royal authority throughout the United Kingdom was completed by state visits to Ireland, Wales and Scotland and late in 1911 the King and Queen paid a visit to India.

They sailed from the King's Portmouth; their ship cast anchor Dec. 2 off Bombay; and 10 days later a spectacular coronation durbar was held outside Delhi amid thousands of natives and troops.

Then from his throne the King read an announcement—the capital of India was to be transferred from Calcutta to Delhi, Eastern Bengal reunited to Bengal and the enlarged province was to have a government in council.

War Halts Irish Deadlock. In February, 1912, the main problem facing the government was Irish home rule and for months a conflict that raged in Parliament was echoed by conflict in Ireland. The deadlock continued well into 1914 when the King again brought into relief the conception of the crown as an influence above party strife by calling a conference in Buckingham Palace.

He urged "a spirit of generous compromise," but the conference did not produce results, and the world war pushed the question into the background momentarily.

King George was a frequent attendant at the theater and football, cricket and polo matches; he swam a pick in a coal mine; and there were visits to many parts of England and Scotland.

In 1913, the King and Queen went to Germany on the occasion of the marriage of Prince Ernest Augustus of Cumberland to the Kaiser's daughter.

Later there was the politically significant visit to London of President Poincaré of France as the King's guest and the return call in 1914 when King George and Queen Mary went to Paris.

The World War Years. In the perilous days that followed the assassination of the Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his consort in Sarajevo, King George made every effort to avert war, addressing personal appeals to the rulers of Germany and Russia.

On Aug. 1, 1914, he dispatched a letter to the President of France in which he said in part: "I am, personally, using my best efforts to bring about peace between Germany and Russia and of Germany towards finding some solution."

Within three days the breach was beyond healing and the King immediately let it be known that no effort would be spared to carry England's cause to victory.

The King and Queen led the royal family in patriotic work. There was a succession of messages initiating or supporting movements at home; cheering words went to the front.

Meanwhile, the royal household set a pattern of rigid economy. It was placed on war rations and the King announced in 1915 that he had suspended the use of alcohol and beverages for himself, his family and the household.

He ordered the names of German and Austrian rulers stricken from the Order of the Garter and two years later changed the name of the British royal family from the house of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha to that of Windsor and relinquished all his German titles.

There were frequent inspections of industrial works, repeated visits to his troops in Belgium and France, tours of hospitals and institutions doing war work, and trips to the Grand Fleet. It was estimated that King George attended more than 1500 ceremonies during the conflict.

Hard On Visit to Front. An accident occurred during a visit to the front in 1915 when the horse he was riding became startled by the sudden cheering of soldiers, reared, and fell back on the King. His injuries were not serious, however, though he returned to England under medical supervision and was confined to his bed for some time. While still on a stretcher in France, he personally conferred two Victoria Crosses.

On April 20, 1917, he attended a cathedral ceremony in London celebrating the entrance of the United States into the war and a year later he became the first British sovereign to participate in the celebration of America's Independence day.

When the armistice was signed Nov. 11, 1918, King George spoke to great crowds from the portico of Buckingham Palace and received great ovations then, on the way to a special transatlantic service the next day in St. Paul's and on succeeding days' drives through London.

Post-War Years. The post-war reign of George V was marked by many troubles. Immediately pressing was the Irish problem which had moved from crisis to crisis during the war, culminating in a new government of Ireland in 1922.

The King and Queen went to Belfast to open the new Ulster Parliament on June 22, 1921.

"I appeal to all Irishmen," he said, "to pause, stretch out the hand of forbearance, and to join in making for the land they love a new era of peace, contentment and good will."

Southern Ireland remained a problem, however, and at length a treaty was signed creating the Irish Free State in 1922.

India, too, came forth with demands for independence and in December, 1919, King George issued a royal proclamation putting into effect a new measure which gave India a larger share in self-government.

In 1930 a further step was taken with the assembling of the first India round-table conference.

Other conferences followed and nearly a year ago a bill granting a measure of self-government was enacted.

Home troubles culminated in 1926 in general strike.

King's Illness in 1928. Two and one-half years later King George lay seriously ill. In December, 1928, the king was seriously ill.

The King recovered slowly, but by May, 1929, plans were well advanced for a thanksgiving service June 16 in Westminster Abbey.

Then, on May 30, he was confined to his bed again. An abscess had formed under the old scar.

He progressed rapidly, however, and the postponed thanksgiving was held July 7.

The next day came the sudden announcement that a further X-ray examination had been decided on. A second operation followed and parts of two ribs were removed to drain the abscess. It was not until January, 1930, that he fulfilled his first public engagement and opened the London Naval Conference.

On Dec. 11, 1931, the assent of the King was given to the statute of Westminster. This gave formal ratification to certain resolutions of the imperial conferences of 1926 and 1930 whereby the autonomous dominions shared with the mother country in responsibility for changes in the law of succession to the throne.

Preventing Ministerial Crisis. In 1931, King George learned in Scotland that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, then heading a Labor Cabinet, was being forced into resignation by demands of the Labor party. King George waived unexpectedly in London and persuaded Stanley Baldwin, Conservative party leader, to enter and support the Government, which presented itself as the gold standard and avoid inflation.

Finally, England went off gold. The Government's next bold step, after winning a general election in which it asked for free trade, was to scrap the historic free trade policy and impose protective tariffs.

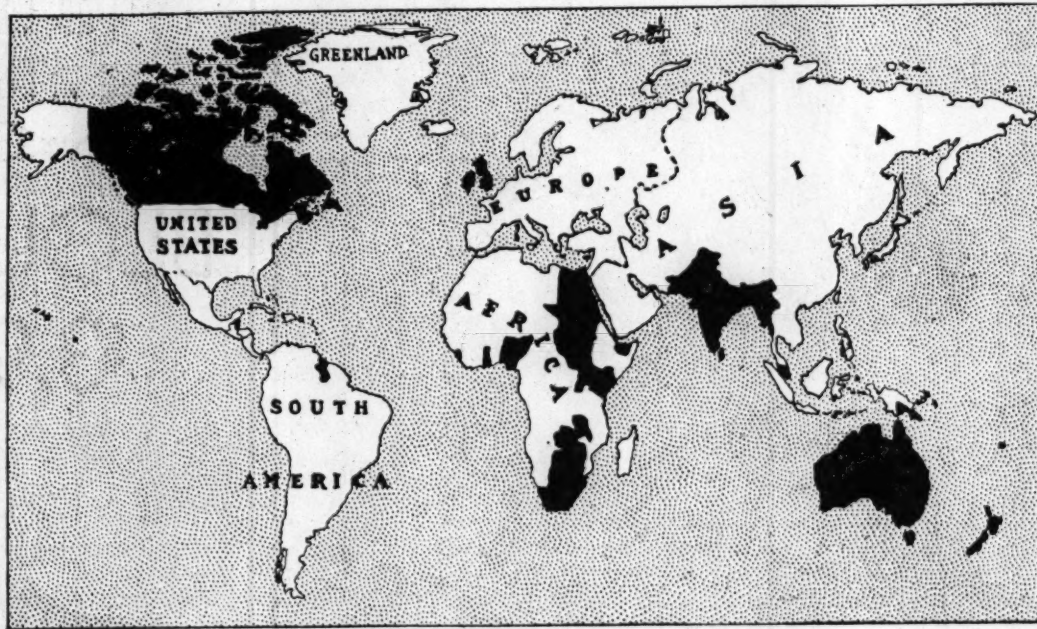

Marriage in 1935. In May, 1935, Queen Victoria made her grandson the Duke of York, Earl of Inverness, and Lord Rothsay, and a year later it was announced that he was engaged to Princess Victoria Mary, who had been betrothed to his brother.

The marriage took place July 6, 1935, and the pair took up residence in St. James's palace, though for many years they divided their time between London and Norfolk.

Their first child, Prince Edward, was born in 1894 in White Lodge, Richmond.

Less than two months after Queen Victoria's death and the ac-which gave impetus to all British activities.

In 1935, King George celebrated his silver jubilee, marking 25 years as ruler of the British empire. Programs were held in hundreds of towns, with the chief one in London.

John Masfield wrote a special prayer and the late Rudyard Kipling published a poem.

There were 300,000 visitors in London for the jubilee. A parade and ball were held, and a review of the troops and police concluded the year's events.

Birth and Early Life. King George, whose full name was George Frederick Ernest Albert, second son of King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra, was born June 3, 1895, in Marlborough House, London. The Prince had no "petticoat" education. His father said to that.

George was only 4 when he was placed with his elder brother, Prince Albert, under the tutelage of John Neale Dalton, then curate of Sandringham and a brilliant Cambridge scholar.

Sport and study were intermingled in their early training but, that over, their father had further plans. Winning Queen Victoria to his way of thinking, he had them entered in 1897 as naval cadets on the Britannia at Spithead.

Two years later they joined the Bacchante and made a cruise to the West Indies, in which the Princes were rated midshipmen. George made many friends. Full of fun, he gained one nickname as "Right Royal Pickle" and as a midshipman he became known as Sprats.

He sought no favors and if his work was not distinguished by brilliance it at least was typified by a duty-at-hand will spirit whether the work at hand was a sail drill or the dirty job of coaling.

In 1899 the Princes started on a second cruise which took them to South America and the ship was at the Falkland Islands when orders were received to proceed to South Africa under service conditions. Boers of the Transvaal had rebelled, demanding an "autonomous" government, but the treaty of Marjuba quickly ended the trouble and the ship continued on to Australia, Japan, China, Ceylon, and home by way of the Suez canal.

The brothers parted and George was appointed to the Canada on the North American and West Indian station and promoted to sub-lieutenant. On his return home he passed through the Royal Naval College at Greenwich and the gunnery and torpedo schools. He was promoted to lieutenant in 1895.

Grows Beard, Commands Ships. It was about this time, when he had just turned 20, that he began growing the beard which in after years was always to call forth remarks of his resemblance to Nicholas II, the last Czar of Russia.

Subsequent service was spent on various ships. His first independent command in 1899 was Torpedo Boat No. 79 on which the sailor-prince showed his stripes by towing into port a sister ship which had broken down and anchored not far from rocks.

In 1899 he was put in command of the gunboat Thrush on the North American and Indian station and in 1891, after his promotion to commander, he commissioned the Melampus.

In January, 1892, George's brother died. The whole course of George's life was changed.

His naval career went forward as usual, but he was only for a brief period in 1898 when he had command of the cruiser Crescent so as to qualify for advancement to rear admiral. In 1901 he achieved that rank and two years later became a vice admiral.

Marriage in 1903. In May, 1892, Queen Victoria made her grandson the Duke of York, Earl of Inverness, and Lord Rothsay, and a year later it was announced that he was engaged to Princess Victoria Mary, who had been betrothed to his brother.

The marriage took place July 6, 1893, and the pair took up residence in St. James's palace, though for many years they divided their time between London and Norfolk.

Their first child, Prince Edward, was born in 1894 in White Lodge, Richmond.

Less than two months after Queen Victoria's death and the accession of King Edward VII, George, who had now become also Duke of Cornwall, embarked on his wife on a great colonial journey.

Leaving England in March, 1901, they sailed on the Ophir for Australia to open the first commonwealth parliament in Melbourne. Among those on board was the Duke's early tutor, now Canon Dalton. They toured Australia and New Zealand, next visited South Africa and then sailed to Canada. By land they covered the dominion from Atlantic to Pacific.

Cheering crowds awaited the royal pair on their return in the fall and King Edward made his own birthday on Nov. 9 the occasion for proclaiming the Duke the Prince of Wales.

The Prince and Princess undertook another great journey in 1905, this time to India.

Sportsman and Collector. In King George, the sporting world had one of its most enthusiastic principals. Not only was he an interested spectator of events ranging from baseball to polo, but he took part himself in many pastimes.

Two branches of sport drew his fullest satisfaction—yachting and shooting, both heritages from his early life. He raced horses and was skilled as a golfer.

He invariably was aboard his yacht Britannia for racing until the later years of his reign.

He neither expected nor received any advantage because of his royal position. Once, in the Bristol Channel Royal Regatta, the owner of the yacht Westward protested against the Britannia, saying that the King's boat did not count.

The Westward a free course around one of the buoys. The committee disqualified the King's entry.

The yacht up until 1933 had taken part in more races and won more prizes—aggregating 346 than any other craft.

One of the King's indoor hobbies for which he became noted was stamp collecting. From his early sailor days on the Bacchante he was keenly interested in philately and experts deemed his collection the finest in existence. He had a special time set aside each week to inspect it.

A Life of Simplicity. Always he was a democratic King. He pursued a conservative, even tenor in his home and official life and the feeling which his subjects held for him became one of constantly growing depth. Unlike his father, who had a flair for wild friendships, King George had a gift for making friends slowly but for keeping them a long time.

His home life set an example of simplicity and moderation. He was a family man and nothing was more characteristic than the cheerful fireside Christmas at Sandringham and the modest family parties in celebration of birthdays and other anniversaries.

Many life-anecdotes sprang up about him. One of the favorites has to do with his inspection of White City, a London stadium, on a wet day.

King George stepped into a puddle of water and splashed his uniform.

"Hush, George," admonished Queen Mary. "Wait until we get home."

Religion was marked by the same simplicity which he brought to other phases of his life. He read the Bible daily, keeping a promise that he made early in his youth to his mother.

Where the reigns of Queen Victoria and King Edward VII were notable for the number of private command entertainments staged for their amusement in various castles and palaces, King George had a different feeling. He showed his favor, instead, by attending gala performances open to the public and from which proceeds went for a pension fund in his name for actors and actresses.

Six Children; One Dead. Queen Mary was the daughter of Frederick, Duke of Teck, and Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess of Teck.

She bore six children, the youngest of whom, Prince John, died at the age of 14. The others are: The Prince of Wales, born June 23, 1894; the Duke of York, born Dec. 14, 1895; the Princess Royal, born April 25, 1897; the Duke of Gloucester, born March 31, 1900; and Prince George, born Dec. 20, 1902.

The Princess Royal was married to Viscount Lascelles, now Earl of Harewood, in 1922 and a year later the Duke of York married Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon.

The princess became the mother of two sons while the Duke and Duchess of York were parents of Princess Elizabeth, born April 21, 1926, and Princess Margaret Rose, born August 21, 1930.

Prince George, as the Duke of Kent, married Princess Marina of Greece on Nov. 23, 1934. A son was born on Oct. 1, 1935.

The Duke of Gloucester married Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott on Nov. 6, 1935.

Washington and Lee Alumni Hold Dinner on Anniversary

Prof. Fitzgerald Flounoy Speaks on Confederate Leader; "Greatest as a Man."

St. Louis alumni of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., observed the anniversary of the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee, an early president of the school, with a dinner at the University Club last night.

The principal speaker was Prof. Fitzgerald Flounoy of the English department at Washington and Lee.

Prof. Flounoy characterized Lee as a man who, like Washington, was great in the great crises; whether to accept, in 1861, the command of the United States Army or to join the Confederacy; whether or not to surrender the army at Appomattox; and what to do in the post-war period. In the last crisis he refused lucrative business offers and became president of the Virginia college.

Lee's character was tested, he said, in the great crises; whether to accept, in 1861, the command of the United States Army or to join the Confederacy; whether or not to surrender the army at Appomattox; and what to do in the post-war period.

New King Takes to Throne Knowledge Gained in Years of Travel Throughout the Empire

After Four Years in War, He Was Assigned as Prince of Wales to Strengthen Unity of Dominions and Colonies.

THE publicity focused on Edward, Prince of Wales, now Edward VIII, Britain's first bachelor King since 1760, began playing on him 42 years ago this coming week.

The first people outside the royal family who knew that a Prince had been born into the direct line of succession, heard of it as their ancestors had learned of such events—frankly and without a cry of a spreading horsemanship.

This horsemanship, a gentleman who had predicted that the first of Queen Victoria's great-grandchildren would be a son, posted himself outside White Lodge, Richmond, as soon as he learned that the present dower, Queen Mary, was expecting a baby there.

In the early hours of the morning of June 23, 1894, the Prince was born. Jumping into the saddle, the horsemanship rode furiously into London, a few miles down the Thames, shouting as he went, "A Prince! A Prince!" His voice and the clatter of his horse's hoofs awoke dwellers along his route.

London, however, first got the news by telegraph. By the time the Prince's birth was known to the world, the bells of the churches in England were ringing.

Queen Victoria as "Granny." Queen Victoria, old and feeble, was one of the first to go to Richmond to see her great-grandson. She was staying at Windsor Castle several miles further up the Thames, at the time, and drove over by carriage on the second day after the Prince's birth.

His two grandmothers, the Princesses of Wales (afterward Queen Alexandra), and the Duchess of Devonshire, were with her. They had a talk, and not long afterward the Prince was transferred to new surroundings and new friends at Cambridge. He had been there only a short while when the war broke, and he left the classroom for the army.

His War Service. The energy of the Prince, whose slight but well-knit body not infrequently stood the strain of swimming, polo, riding to hounds, attending teas and receptions and formal dinners all in one day, and then dancing until dawn the next morning, was well shown during the war. He was 20 years old when the fighting began, and he spent most of the next four years within the sound of the guns.

Even before he went to France the Prince's vigor amazed sergeants to whom he was, outside the ranks of their voices, "his little boy." He was a junior officer when war was declared and, leaving Cambridge, he began drilling and training troops.

At that time he lived at Buckingham Palace with his parents and had not yet taken over York House, St. James's Palace, which he later occupied.

There was then nothing unusual about his turning out at 7 o'clock in the morning, taking a long run in the grounds back of the palace, racing across the green park to the bath tub, off Piccadilly, playing a hot game of squash racquets, taking a plunge bath and swim and then returning to Buckingham Palace in time to dress for the family breakfast.

He was nearly always in high spirits no matter how busy, and there are many who think he has long been the busiest man in the Empire.

Kept Back by Generals. He went to the war gaily, sensitive about only one thing—his position. He was told that he was to be spared because of his position from dangers others were asked to face. It was only by the exercise of tact on the part of some Generals, and stern discipline on the part of others, that he was kept for the most part, not out of all danger, but away from the greatest dangers.

The Prince went to France with his regiment of Grenadier Guards and remained in that zone for more than a year. In May, 1916, he was transferred to the staff of the commanding general on the Italian front. A month later he went on to Egypt as a staff captain. He chafed against regulations and orders which kept him from the firing line, but for reasons of state and dynastic considerations he was retained on staff duty.

In France he earned the praise of Gen. Sir John French, the late Earl of Ypres, who was then commander-in-chief of the British Expeditionary Forces. Staff work bored the Prince, however, and he often expressed a wish to get up to the front. Often he succeeded in doing so, and many stories are told of his venturesomeness and his prowess. By the time he was gazetted as aide-de-camp to Sir John French he had won praise from many sources for his devotion to duty.

When the war ended the young Prince was given the duty of linking the British dominions and colonies more firmly to the throne and Union Jack, symbols of their kinship and unity. For years he made trips to outlying possessions of the empire over which he was born to preside. In that period he visited every continent, bearing messages of good will to British subjects and also to friendly countries like the United States, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Brazil and Japan.

Officialdom of the capitals of these countries knew him. So too did the ranchmen of the Canadian northwest, the guile and hunters of the African veldt, the jungle trail-ers of India, the pleasure-seekers of Long Island and the brilliant social circles of Santiago de Chile and Buenos Aires, Paris and the Riviera. He was widely recognized as one of the most influential in stabilizing the constitutional monarchy of Great Britain in days when thrones were tumbling and the world was turning to varying forms of republicanism.

He went to each dominion to meet its leaders and to learn its mode of life; to non-British realms to forward friendly relations with Britain in those countries. Everywhere, observers said, he left a mark of his presence, his prestige and his understanding of the people of the world.

His Accomplishments along these lines were summed up in the words of the "super-salesman" of the British Empire.

He first visited the United States in the summer of 1919, when he was on his way to Canada. On that occasion New York's just swinging into its welcoming routine for distinguished visitors, dressed itself in its best bunting and showered him with flowers.

On that journey, he bought a Canadian Rockies. He saw it the second time when he made a trip in 1923 and again the next year when he made a private journey to the United States. On this latter occasion, he was on a holiday, and most of his hours were devoted to recreation, an exception being a call on President Coolidge at the White House.

Friend of British Workers. In the intervals of these journeys, the Prince explored the nooks and crannies of the United Kingdom. When post-war distress settled on the mining regions of England, Wales and Scotland, he went from village to village, talked with the miners, their wives and children, entered their poor homes and did not hesitate to express horror at the squalor of their conditions.

On his visits to shipyards, factories and other industrial undertakings, he showed a strong determination to "see things" for himself. British workmen came

He went to each dominion to meet its leaders and to learn its mode of life; to non-British realms to forward friendly relations with Britain in those countries. Everywhere, observers said, he left a better comprehension of the power type of royalty that rests its prestige on intelligent and sympathetic understanding rather than on the mere accident of birth.

His accomplishments along these lines were summed up in the journalistic phrase bestowed on him of "the super-salesman of the British Empire."

He first visited the United States in the summer of 1919, when he was on his way to Canada. On that occasion New York, just swinging into its welcoming routine for distinguished visitors, dressed itself in its best bunting and showered him with ticker tape.

On that journey, he bought a ranch in the foothills of the Canadian Rockies. He saw it the first time when he made a trip in 1923 and again the next year when he made a private journey to the United States. On this latter occasion, he was on a holiday, and most of his hours were devoted to recreation, an exception being a call on President Coolidge at the White House.

In the intervals of these journeys, the Prince explored the nooks and crannies of the United Kingdom. When post-war distress settled on the mining regions of England, Wales and Scotland, he went from village to village, talked with the miners, their wives and children, entered their poor homes and did not hesitate to express horror at some of the conditions.

On his visits to shipyards, factories and other industrial undertakings, he showed a strong determination to "see things" for himself. British workmen came to regard him as a friend, for they believed that his observations helped the well-to-do of the nation see the struggle for existence in a clearer light.

The Prince has been kept so busy working and traveling that he has had less time than his brothers to spend with his parents, yet he has managed to join in considerably with the ordinary family life which the House of Windsor liked to lead. Once a week, at least, when he has been in London, the court calendar has reported that the Prince of Wales visited Buckingham Palace "and remained to luncheon," or perhaps dinner. He made many short, hurried visits to his parents that the court calendar never recorded.

Youthful Appearance.
Although the new King is 41 years old sometimes his face seems almost boyish. He is of medium height and of well-knit, slim build. His hair is golden and his clean-shaven features are somewhat aquiline.

He is well groomed and his changes in dress have changed styles to the profit of British manufacturers.

The gaudy jerseys and sweaters knitted from Fair Isle woolsens were in only moderate demand a few years ago. One day the Prince wore one to play golf. He was photographed. Fair Isle sweaters soon became popular on both sides of the Atlantic.

Later the Prince introduced a new type of evening dress tie—shaped like a butterfly. If he appeared with a dress shirt-front made of the same material as his white waistcoat, he was quickly imitated. If he wore a colored handkerchief in his upper overcoat pocket, well-dressed men in London did also. Later the styles spread to Paris and New York.

The Latest in Hats.
When he visited New York the anxiety to copy his dress was evidenced more than once. One day,

BRITISH FLAG LOWERED AT OFFICES OF CONSULATE

Members of Staff in St. Louis to Observe Official Period of Mourning.

The Union Jack, flag of the British Empire, was lowered to half-staff today outside the ninth-floor offices of the British Consulate at 1118 Olive street in memory of King George.

H. E. Bowie, British Consul in St. Louis, said in a statement today, "I have been impressed by the respect and esteem in which the King was held in St. Louis. It became especially evident in the kindly solicitude St. Louisans have shown me during the past few anxious days. Britons regard the death of the King as the loss of a personal friend," he said.

Members of the consular staff will observe the official period of mourning to be announced by the Lord Chamberlain in England. They canceled social engagements at word of the sovereign's death.

Don't Stake Your Child's Life against a Few Pennies

Don't Try to "Save" by Not Calling a Doctor or Risk Giving Unknown Remedies Without First Getting his Opinion

NOT seeing your doctor, when illness threatens your child, is not economy—it's a mistake upon which life itself often has depended. By the same token, giving your child unknown remedies—"bargain close-outs" and "just as good" as standard remedies is staking a child's health against a few pennies.

Mothers are becoming more and more conscious of this every day, and acting accordingly... accepting no remedy they don't know all about without asking the doctor first.

WITNESS TELLS OF LIST OF 307 SILICOSIS DEAD

House Committee Informed That Doctor Had Names of Tunnel Victims.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—William J. Finkle, a New York photographer, testified before a House committee today that a Fayetteville (W. Va.) physician had shown him a list of 307 men who died of silicosis after working in the Hawk's Nest tunnel in southern West Virginia.

Finkle said that in addition to these deaths, Dr. L. R. Harless told him that examination of more than 200 tunnel workers showed they had the disease.

Dr. Harless sent a letter to the House Labor subcommittee today saying that reports of wholesale deaths at the project were "grossly exaggerated."

Finkle expressed the opinion that representatives of the Rinehart & Dennis Co. of Charlottesville, Va., which drilled the tunnel in 1930 and 1931, probably had brought pressure on the doctor to make him change his statement.

Gilbert Love, a newspaper writer, who recently investigated silicosis deaths at Gauley Bridge, told the committee that Dr. Harless informed him that examination of 370 men showed that more than half had contracted silicosis.

The doctor wrote the committee that many of the damage suits brought against the company were meritorious but many were "just a racket."

Finkle also detailed conversations with A. A. Lilly, former Attorney-General of West Virginia, who represented some of the workers in their damage suits. He said Lilly expressed the opinion that there had been attempts made to influence juries in favor of the contracting company.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (Rep., New York), who is asking for a Labor Department inquiry into the Hawk's Nest tunnel work, read into the record a Federal Emergency Relief Administration report which said that the contractor had taken no steps to protect the tunnel workers from breathing silica dust while drilling the tunnel.

EDWARD VIII FIRST BRITISH BACHELOR KING SINCE 1760

on Long Island, perhaps because it was hot and sunny, the Prince wore the brim of his Panama hat turned down all around. The next day thousands of men wore Panama hats with the brims turned down.

Then the Prince came out with a felt hat. The brim instead of being turned up all 'round, was turned down to shade his eyes and one side of his face. That sort of hat became the fashion. In a few weeks the new style reached London. But when the Prince himself got home he wore the type of hat he had favored before he left.

The King has certain mannerisms which have sometimes been attributed to nervousness, such as patting his hair, rearranging his necktie or feeling the seams of his trousers, but friends say this is merely a sign of restlessness during timesome preliminaries or long formalities.

He has a rather high-pitched resonant voice and speaks with clarity of enunciation and convincing sincerity. His smile is engaging. It sometimes, however, gives place to an indignant frown, and he can and has used sulphurous and emphatic language when irritated.

The Prince's Sports.

Like many Britons he excels in no particular sport, but has participated in a variety of them. He has been happiest when riding to hounds or playing polo.

His horsemanship aroused anxiety at home and also evoked levity on both sides of the Atlantic. He has been unseated many times. Some of these falls resulted in injuries of a somewhat serious nature. Friends, however, have resented assumptions that he is a poor horseman. They point out that everyone who rides as hard and as frequently as the Prince did has many spills. He has won several prizes in point-to-point steeplechases.

Whatever the quality of his horsemanship, there was no flaw in his courage in taking every obstacle in the hunt. He rode without caution.

Public worry over the risks he was running, coupled with a desire to set an example of economy in stressful years, induced him in 1929 to auction his stables.

Aviation and motor boating were other hobbies. He took flying lessons, added a pilot to his personal staff, maintained his own plane and used the air for many of his hops about Britain or his short jaunts to the continent.

He swam a great deal, mostly to refresh himself after indoor exercise. Occasionally he played squash racquets.

At boxing he was fairly adept, but he did not put on the gloves often. When on shipboard, he visited the gymnasium almost daily, and took long fast walks on deck. If he was in the country, and riding was not convenient, he played golf. He apparently did not care much for tennis.

Likes to Dance.

He likes to dance and seems to put off going to bed as long as he can.

Without doubt he has been photographed more times than any other man. Almost everything he does in his daily life has been recorded by cameras. At an outdoor camp, he has even been photographed washing his face.

Although he sometimes is annoyed by the picture-taking he seldom shows it. One day he appeared in public with a black eye and a swollen face as a result of an accident at racquets. Cameramen flocked around him. Stalling, he pointed to his face and said, "Not today, if you don't mind, cut it out."

He is a breeder of pedigree cattle. His ranch in Canada is one of his cherished possessions, and his entries have carried off many prizes on both sides of the Atlantic.

King George long was a breeder of prize cattle and pigs, and the Prince, his war days over, also entered enthusiastically into the business. He was already the owner of great tracts of farm land, since it was from the Duchy of Cornwall—the Prince being the hereditary Duke—that he obtained the bulk of his income.

Bachelor King.

That he did not marry was a subject of concern for years to thousands of his prospective subjects. His name was linked with that of first one eligible Princess and then with another, sometimes with young women of British noble families and even with commoners, but no hint came from Wales himself.

In time the talk died down, especially after the eldest of his three brothers, the Duke of York, married and became the father of Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. The heir himself once reflected this change of opinion when he remarked: "After all England had a virgin Queen; why not a bachelor King?"

Edward Albert is not the first bachelor to become King of England. George III, who ascended the throne in 1760, was not married till a year later. He married Charlotte of Mecklenburg. Before him, Charles II. reigned alone for two years until he married Catherine of Braganza in 1662. WILL also was a bachelor when he succeeded his father in 1509, at the age of 18, but he married his brother's widow, Catherine of Aragon, a few months later.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 21.—Jean Trombley, missing from her home nine hours, was found hanging by her head from a railroad bridge three and a half miles from her home last night. She was apparently uninjured beyond shock and cold. Searchers who found her said the 8-year-old child apparently had slipped between two railroad ties while crossing the bridge.

David Lloyd George's Tribute: A Good Man, a Good King and Always an Advocate of Peace

British Premier During World War Declares That George V Was a Truly Constitutional Monarch.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, King George's Prime Minister During the World War. (Copyright, 1935.)

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The British people in every clime and continent throughout the world are today mourning the death of a good man who occupied the most exalted position in his realm.

For over 25 years he had stood on that conspicuous eminence where his life was visible from afar to many more millions of every race than any other potentate reigned over.

The more they saw of the man the greater was their respect for the King. As the years passed that respect matured into devotion, and in his later years that again deepened into affection.

Real Sterling Quality.

The people, high and low, rich and poor alike, knew that his quality was not counterfeit glitter that passes as currency for awhile, but that it was real sterling, the coin they trusted most.

The extraordinary display of sympathy evoked by his serious illness seven years ago and the amazing display of affectionate loyalty at the jubilee celebrations six months ago showed the hold he had won by his sterling qualities.

Amongst the hundreds of millions of his subjects he was not only a good man—he was a good King. There have been many instances in history of good men who have made bad kings. They have invariably brought trouble to the nations over which they ruled.

George V was a wise King. His departure in this troubled era, is a severe blow, for he was essentially a man of peace.

He was a kindly man and he was horrified by the cruelties and the tortures of war.

Recalls Conversation. The last time I had a conversation with him, the international situation was threatening. The snarling in the Ethiopian jungle was deafening, and the Continent thought war impending.

The King was vehement in his insistence that he would never consent to make war. I have never seen him so intense and passionate. He was, through and through, a man of peace.

He had no responsibility, either direct or indirect, for the Great War. He embarked upon it with unfeigned reluctance. Once in it he played his part unostentatiously, but well.

He was the Versailles picture of a grand monarch mounted on a prancing steed, brandishing his sword and from a safe distance waving on his troops to go into battle with the arrayed foe.

In my war memoirs I have given a sketch of his quiet but helpful activities. He undertook tasks which a King alone could perform in those days.

There is nothing to be gained by flattery, a dead King, so now that he is dead, I confirm with redoubled emphasis everything I wrote about him when he was alive.

A Constitutional King.

He was by temperament, as well as by training and conviction, a truly constitutional monarch. In many respects he was the most perfect model of a constitutional King. There have been sovereigns who took the oath at their coronation to respect the Constitution, but spent their lives in trying by every device to dodge it.

The late King was a supremely honest person. He honored the coronation oath not only in the letter but in the spirit.

I served as one of his Ministers for 12 years. I have never seen him try to evade his constitutional duty by attempting to thwart or place obstacles in the way of carrying out any policy or plan upon which his Parliament were resolved.

Before he came to the throne he had the reputation of being very Tory in his views. In those days he was frank, even to the point of indiscretion, in his talk; and his sayings were repeated in wide circles.

There is no use concealing the fact that they gave offense to Liberals, and his succession to the throne for that reason was viewed with some misgiving.

But from the moment the death of his father clothed him with responsibility, he made it clear to his Ministers that he meant to be faithful to the spirit of our democratic constitution.

First Real Test. His great test came as soon as he ascended the throne. It was a severe and even a terrible job for an untried monarch.

There was a deadly conflict between the two houses of Parliament. The Lords had thrown out my budget in 1909 but it was only the last of a long succession of measures carried by liberal Parliaments which they had destroyed. The election, therefore, was fought not only on the merits of my financial proposals but on the question of effecting such a reform in the constitution as would insure that the will of the people, as expressed by the House of Commons, should prevail whatever party was in power.

Such a reform could only become law with the assent of the Upper House, as the Conservatives had a majority of at least five to one in that House (the Lords).

The only way to insure a majority in the Lords to effect such a change was by the creation of a sufficient number of Peers to alter the party complexion of the House of Lords.

The King alone can create Peers, but he generally accepts recommendations submitted to him by the Prime Minister of the day, but only two or three names at a time.

This time he was asked to create a batch of 300 new Peers. He was placed in a grave dilemma. In order to give him full assurance as to the wishes of the people on the matter before he took such a drastic step, the Government decided to have another general election on this one issue. The result was a substantial majority for the change.

The King accepted the verdict of the people and agreed to create as many Peers as were necessary to carry through the Lords a measure that would limit its powers of veto.

When this became known, the Conservative leaders surrendered and the veto bill was carried by a small majority without the addition of any new Peers.

Loyal Interpretation of Duties. This episode caused great bitterness in the die-hard ranks, but no one doubts now that the King had interpreted loyally his duties as a constitutional sovereign.

That attitude he maintained right through to the end. There was some criticism amongst Socialists of the part he played in the resignation of the Labor Ministry and the formation of the national Government, but here again he acted on the advice of his Prime Minister.

James Ramsay MacDonald was solely responsible for the initiation of the change. It was his suggestion, and the King accepted it from the chief minister who was his constitutional adviser.

The popularity of the new King, Edward VIII, is universal. He has won it by a magnetism in which he resembles his grandfather, Edward VII, rather than his father.

He is faced at the outset of his reign with an accumulation of trouble at home and abroad such as few Kings have ever confronted.

I predict that his courage and his sure instinct will not fail him in the trials that await him.

WPA ALLOCATES $380,000 TO RIVER PARKWAY AT ALTON

Work on Project Expected to Begin in Week or 10 Days; 4000 Men to Be Hired.

An allocation of $380,266 has been made to begin work on the $2,793,133 parkway program, which includes the construction of a scenic highway along the east shore of the Mississippi River between Alton and Grafton, Ill., Fred G. Austin, Works Progress Administration director in East St. Louis, announced yesterday.

Work on the program, which is expected to begin within a week or 10 days, will give employment to about 4000 men, 90 per cent of whom are to be selected from the Madison County relief rolls. The county WPA scale, providing $48 a month for unskilled labor to $70 a month for skilled labor, will be paid on the parkway program.

The highway, 30 feet wide with 10-foot shoulders, is intended to provide access to the new lake, which will be formed by the Alton Dam. The highway will be 16 miles long and will connect Alton and Grafton with Clifton Terrace, Lockhaven, Elmhurst, and Chautauqua. The parkway program also contemplates the building of three sand beaches, 400 acres of landscaping and 700 acres of picnic and recreational area.

Massachusetts Assembly Asked to Revoke 300-Year-Old Sentence.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 21.—Three hundred years after Roger Williams was expelled from Massachusetts because of religious differences with the Puritans, the State Legislature heard arguments today that the sentence of expulsion be revoked.

The petitioner, K. H. Washburn, of Middleboro, made the request in connection with this year's celebration of the tercentenary of Rhode Island, to which Williams went to settle after the Massachusetts Bay colony would have no more of him.

TELLS OF 'CONFESSION' BY SCOTTSBORO NEGRO

Prison Guard Testifies Heywood Patterson Admitted Attack on Woman.

By the Associated Press

DECATUR, Ala., Jan. 21.—The state, through a guard from Kilby prison, introduced today an alleged oral confession of Heywood Patterson in which the guard quoted him as saying he was guilty of attacking Mrs. Victoria Price, complainant in the Scottsboro case.

Over defense objections, and after hearing the testimony with the jury withdrawn from the courtroom, Judge W. W. Callahan, admitted the alleged confession.

The guard, Ople Golden, testified that in November, 1934, while Patterson was in the death house, he was taken to the death house by the United States Supreme Court. The Negro had told him he attacked "them girls and was guilty and Clarence Norris and the other seven also were guilty."

Patterson, Golden testified, made the statement to him while he was on his night round, after he had asked to talk to Warden George Walls.

Samuel S. Leibowitz of New York, chief of defense counsel, cross-examined Golden.

"Didn't you have writing materials in the prison, so this confession could have been written down?" Leibowitz asked. "Yes sir, they had it in their cells," Golden replied.

The guard admitted he made no effort to give the information to Warden Walls until the succeeding day, that he then told him "Heywood wanted to see him."

Earlier Mrs. Price testified before a jury of white men today for the eighth time of the Scottsboro assault case.

Although 12 Negroes were in the panel of 100, none was chosen for actual jury service. Ten farmers, a carpenter and one unemployed man were chosen. The lack of Negroes on the grand and trial juries brought the last reversal of the case by the United States Supreme Court, which held Negroes were "systematically excluded."

One Negro served on the grand jury which recently returned new indictments. Mrs. Price testified she and Ruby Bates caught a freight train at Chattanooga, March 25, 1931, to return to Huntsville. Near Stevenson, she said, a group of Negroes entered a gondola car in which she and the Bates girl were riding. After a fight in which six or seven white boys were thrown off, Mrs. Price said, she was attacked by six Negroes. She identified Patterson as one of her attackers. Patterson has been sentenced to death three times, but was saved twice by Supreme Court rulings and once by an Alabama Judge who granted a new trial.

Frank Pisciotto, 800 Wash street, and Tony Bono, 1938 O'Fallon street, pleaded guilty today of possessing 600 gallons of mash and a still and were sentenced by Federal Judge Moore to eight months in the Audrain County Jail at Mexico, Mo., and fined $500. The mash and still were found on their farm near Eureka, Mo., by Federal alcohol agents last April.

Otha Bartel, St. James, Mo., pleaded guilty of possessing 40 gallons of mash and a still on his father's farm near St. James and was sentenced to four months in the Mexico Jail. 114 TORPEDO-BOMBERS ORDERED FOR U.S. NAVY

To Be Used on Two Aircraft Carriers That Will Be Completed in 1937.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The navy placed an order yesterday for 114 torpedo-bombers to be used on two new aircraft carriers scheduled for completion next year. The contract, calling for expenditure of $3,636,000 exclusive of engines, was awarded to the Douglas Aircraft Co. of Santa Monica, Cal. The purchase of new planes, naval officials said, had no connection with the London naval conference failure to agree on a new naval limitation treaty, but was in line with the administration's intention to build the navy up to the full strength authorized by the Washington treaty by 1942.

1910 Combat Planes by 1942. To keep pace with increases in other branches of the navy toward the 1942 strength objective, a program for a total of 1910 combat planes by that time is being followed. At present the navy has 1068 planes actually in service and 400 others contracted for.

Average necessary replacements amount to about 300 planes yearly. In President Roosevelt's recent budget message to Congress, $27,600,000 was set aside in proposed new naval appropriations, plus unexpended funds on hand, for the purchase of new planes.

To Have Much Greater Speed. Although specifications, speed and other details were kept secret, the Navy Department's announcement said the torpedo-bombers "will have markedly greater speed, considerably greater range as well as many improved characteristics of performance over previous types of this class."

The new sea fighters, which can carry either torpedoes or bombs, but not both, are of a new type low wing land monoplane, powered by single engines. They are designed exclusively for service on airplane carriers.

British Admiralty Decides Big by the Ships Are All Right.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The British Government made a sharp upward revision last night of its views on the maximum sizes of battleships, other types of warships and gun calibers.

This development, reported by authoritative naval circles, apparently was the result of Japan's withdrawal from the international naval conference and the Italian-Ethiopian war.

Viscount Monsell, First Lord of the Admiralty, gave Norman H. Davis, chief American delegate to the naval conference, a preliminary outline of the revised views at a long Anglo-American meeting last night.

Formerly, the British wanted to reduce the maximum size of battleships from 35,000 tons to 26,500 and to reduce naval guns from a maximum of 16 inches to 12 inches. Now they have decided that battleships of more than 30,000 tons displacement are not too big, and they are more favorably inclined toward guns closer to the size of the present maximum.

It is understood the British revised their views on other types of naval vessels, as well.

THEORY THAT A PASSENGER WRECKED PLANE TO END LIFE

Inquiry at Memphis Centers Around Pistol and Metal With Small Hole in It.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 21.—A pistol and a piece of metal with a hole the size of a bullet, today entered to inquiry into the crash of the American Air Lines plane "Southerner," in which 17 lives were lost. The pistol and metal were taken from the wreckage.

The Dallas (Tex.) News reported American Air Lines officials were investigating a theory that a passenger—temporarily deranged or seeking to commit suicide without invalidating his insurance policies—caused the crash. The newspaper said it learned one of the passengers had made two attempts to take out an additional $25,000 life insurance policy after boarding the plane in the East.

The body of one passenger was reported to have been found in front of those of the pilots, leading to the belief a third person may have been in the control compartment at the time of the crash. Sheriff J. M. Campbell of Forrest City, Ark., said that if the hole in the metal was made by a bullet, it was fired from inside the ship.

OFFERS PROPOSAL TO RID CITY OF SMOKE NUISANCE

A. S. Langsdorf Recommends Modification of Plants by Bond Issue, Paid by Owners.

A proposal that the city issue bonds for modification of household heating plants, to bring about smokeless consumption of various fuels, subject to repayment by property owners, has been made in a public statement by A. S. Langsdorf, dean of the Washington University schools of engineering and architecture and former vice-chairman of the City Plan Commission.

He said such a scheme would assure a clean city, but retain for householders the right to use whatever fuels they desired. He thought the saving in smoke damage would offset the cost of modifying equipment in a year or two, and suggested that home owners could repay the city in easy installments with low interest. The fundamental issue, he declared, was that the smoke nuisance was "ruining the city by a process of economic strangulation," driving to the suburbs the economic class best able to pay city taxes.

ROOSEVELT AND LEADERS AGREE ON NEW FARM PLAN

Legislation Limited to Two Years Likely to Be Introduced Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Details of a new two-year farm program were agreed on today by President Roosevelt and congressional leaders. Bills providing necessary amendments to the Soil Conservation Act will be presented immediately.

The legislation probably will be introduced tomorrow by Senator Bankhead (Dem.), Alabama, and Representative Jones (Dem.), Texas.

Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, said that the question of new taxes to replace the invalidated processing levies had been discussed but no conclusions had been reached.

The two-year limitation on the new program was not explained.

Secretary of Share Croppers' Union Charges Members of Earle, Ark., Meeting Were Clubbed.

TWO NEGRO GUARDS SHOT; ONE ARRESTED

100 Evicted From Single Plantation, Including 25 Children, According to Complaint.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EARLE, Ark., Jan. 21.—Members of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union say that no reply has been received to their request to President Roosevelt to send a personal representative or a congressional committee to investigate alleged outrages against Eastern Arkansas sharecroppers.

Reported eviction of over 100 persons from one plantation in Cross County, assault on a Deputy Sheriff in Crockett County, and threats of lynching against an organizer for the union featured the newest outbreak in farm labor troubles in this section during the past few days.

The appeal to President Roosevelt asked for "protection of our constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and the right to assemble peaceably," and was sent to Washington Saturday afternoon after citizens had broken up a union meeting in a Negro church near here.

Howard Kester of Nashville, Tenn., a minister, Socialist party member and union organizer, told officers that he was dragged from the church, threatened with lynching, and escorted out of town by mob members. "If it had not been for three or four level-headed men in the crowd I believe they would have lynched me," Kester said.

Prosecutor Tells of Shootings. Prosecuting Attorney Denver L. Dudley of the Second Judicial District, Jonesboro, said that armed Negro guards had been attending the sharecroppers' rallies and that serious trouble was narrowly averted Thursday night when Deputy Sheriff Everett Hood stopped by a meeting and was challenged by an armed Negro guard.

When Hood started to question the Negro, according to Dudley, the guard cocked and aimed his shotgun at the officer. Hood grabbed a shotgun from another Negro's hands and knocked the weapon from the first guard's hands. Jim Ball, Negro, was taken to jail, and Hood returned with another officer, Deputy Sheriff Beacher.

Several Negroes threatened them, Dudley said, but when the two officers approached, they fled. The officers shot at them and wounded two Negroes, Virge Ligons and Ed Franklin, slightly.

Dudley said he had talked with many Negro tenants in investigating the case and that a majority of them assured him that they were satisfied with the treatment accorded them by landlords.

Organizer Taken Out of Town. Between 450 and 500 whites and Negroes were at the meeting Friday night when the white men appeared with guns and clubs and dispersed the crowd, taking Kester to the outskirts of the town and telling him not to return.

H. L. Mitchell, secretary of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, said blackjacks and clubs were used to drive away persons attending the meeting. He said men, women and children were "clubbed unmercifully." Even Mitchell, formerly of Poinsett County and now of Memphis, declared Saturday that 100 sharecroppers, including 25 children 6 years of age and under, had been evicted from the C. H. Dibble plantation in Cross County and were forced to take refuge on the roadside without either food or shelter.

Mitchell was active in the survey which Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, made in this section over a year ago.

Several weeks ago the union held its State convention in Little Rock and picketing of several plantations in Cross and Crittenden counties was ordered.

One union member was arrested here recently on a charge of violating an ordinance prohibiting a public gathering on the streets. The charge was dismissed a few days later.

Gov. Futrell Says Union's Charges Will Be Investigated. LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 20.—Gov. J. Marion Futrell has promised a speedy investigation into Southern tenant farmer union charges of mass eviction of tenants and breaking up of meetings by officers and armed vigilantes in Eastern Arkansas.

His action was in reply to a telegram from H. L. Mitchell, Southern Tenant Farmers' Union secretary at Memphis, asking "your influence to stop these inhuman evictions and the breaking up of legal meetings."

"Mitchell told the Governor that 'mass eviction of tenants near Earle, Ark., by plantation owners is beginning.' He said over 100 persons, including 25 children, were sitting on the roadside without adequate food, clothing or shelter of any kind and that they were not even permitted firewood by landlords."

"Your telegram," wrote Gov. Futrell, "details very distressing conditions of some people near Earle. I think I am in a position to have a complete investigation made. This will be speedily done."

Gov. Futrell said that "some people in indigent circumstances have no one to blame but themselves. As to those in actual distress, application should be made to the County Welfare Board, which will cause an investigation to be made, and I am sure that relief for all will be found."

CANADA TO OBSERVE DAY OF MOURNING

Government Officials Send Messages of Loyalty and Condolence to New King.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—A day of mourning will be proclaimed for all lands on the day of the funeral of King George V.

The city hall tower bell in Toronto tolled slowly at one minute intervals for an hour last night after word of the King's death was received. Flags were at half staff.

James Somers, city clerk of Toronto, announced a proclamation would be issued calling for suspension of business there during the funeral. Church services will be held at the same time throughout the city.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in Ottawa, called a message of loyalty and affection to the new sovereign, and expressed sympathy in his bereavement. He also sent messages to Queen Mary and other members of the royal family.

In his cablegram to Edward VIII, the Canadian Prime Minister said in part: "His late Majesty King George was greatly beloved by his subjects in Canada. No sovereign had had so close an association with our country, and toward him, on the part of all, were feelings of personal attachment and devotion."

"Canada shares with the other nations of the British Commonwealth in mourning the loss of one whose personality and public service strengthened the bonds of their friendship and unity, and who, as man and king, enjoyed universal esteem."

"The many and close relationships with Canada which your majesty possesses are much in the thoughts of the Canadian people at this time. To loyalty and affection there will be added on the part of all Canadians a deep desire earnestly to support and uphold your majesty in your great responsibilities."

seven other Democrats in opposition, were the most outspoken in speaking against the measure.

"The bill before us, King said, 'does not rest upon sound ethics. It opposes it because it is not founded upon justice or equity.' He also asserted that more than $9,000,000 already had been paid out to World War veterans in direct and indirect benefits.

Burke said he saw no justification for passing the bill "in view of the financial strain on the Treasury."

Senators Walsh (Dem.), Massachusetts, and Steiwer (Rep.), Oregon, the latter a co-author, carried the burden of the debate for the measure. Walsh said he could not accept the contention the bill would "dangerously overload the Government's debt structure."

Steiwer said the United States alone of the world's nations had no debt. He said the bill would "expand into the national movie exhibition business. MOVIE SUIT DISPUTE OVER THEATERS' BOOKS Defense Objects to Showing Orpheum-Shubert Records; Private Inspection.

Testimony for the Government in the protracted trial to enjoin Warner Bros., Paramount and R-K-O movie interests from withholding films from Fanchon and Marco's Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central theaters continued today before Federal Judge Joseph W. Moynihan.

The case was in its third week, with a number of Government witnesses yet to be called.

Arguments of counsel on the admissibility in evidence of certain statements attributed by witnesses heretofore to various representatives of the defendants were begun yesterday and concluded today. The Judge had permitted this testimony to be given conditionally, subject to his ruling on the arguments. Special Assistant Attorney-General Walter Rice cited a long line of legal decisions on the subject yesterday, the most recent of which was in the Teapot Dome case.

Responding to a subpoena duces tecum obtained by the Government, W. Stewart McDonald of St. Louis, assistant treasurer of one of the defendants, General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., appeared in court yesterday with numerous records of the Orpheum and Shubert theaters. His corporation has operated these houses for Warner Bros. since Fanchon and Marco obtained the other establishments in 1934.

Defense objections to these records as irrelevant and incompetent were sustained by the Judge, but Special Assistant Attorney-General Russell Hardy, in charge of the Government's case, said he would argue the point. He declared the records were vital to the Government in showing that the Orpheum and Shubert had lost money, as part of the evidence that Warners were carrying out a threat to throw their resources into a fight on Fanchon and Marco.

Mr. McDonald spent two hours on the stand identifying records, defense agreed to let Government counsel inspect them privately.

The "Fanchon" of Fanchon and Marco was a witness briefly. She is Mrs. Fanchon Wolf Simon, Los Angeles. With her brother, Marco Wolff, she used to appear in vaudeville, then they started their firm as producers of stage shows, later expanding into the national movie exhibition business. She described her career, but, because of defense objections, was not permitted to tell of conversations she and her brother had with Adolf Zukor, then president of Paramount.

The defense argued that what Zukor said was not binding, as his company was in receivership at the time.

Child Burned at Bonfire. James, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Parker, 4324 Maryland avenue, was burned on both legs and the lower part of the body yesterday afternoon when he got too close to a bonfire in a lot near his home and his clothing caught fire. He was taken to City Hospital.

Driver, Also Injured, Tells Police He Apparently Fell Asleep at Arsenal and Gravois. Francis J. Vogel, 3121A Arsenal street, suffered compound fractures of both legs and of the left forearm at 8:30 a. m. today when struck by an automobile on the curb at the northwest corner of Arsenal and Gravois avenue. The car broke an electric traffic signal and then knocked Vogel down.

The driver, who said he was Kenneth W. Richey, a printer, 4101 Wilmington avenue, told police he apparently had fallen asleep after 27 hours of almost uninterrupted work. He was cut on the face. Both men were taken to City Hospital.

Two Men Board Truck and Rob Driver of $25. Charles Ashille, 1113A Montgomery street, a chauffeur for the Northwestern Hotel Co., was robbed of $25.60 at 5 a. m. yesterday by two men who boarded his truck on Palm street near Twelfth boulevard. One drew a revolver and the other took the money, then both drove away in another machine.

Harry Evans, attendant of a filling station at 858 Hadimont avenue, was robbed of $13 at 7 p. m. by an armed man who locked him in the washroom and tore the telephone from the wall.

Son Born to Fred Astaire and Wife. HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Astaire today announced birth of a son, weighing 8½ pounds. The wife of the dancer is the former Phyllis Livingstone Potter.

RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES OF CITY UP LAST 9 MONTHS

Increases of $454,363 and $338,055, Respectively, as Compared With Corresponding 1934-35 Period.

Both receipts and expenditures of the city for the first nine months of the fiscal year 1935-36, which ended Jan. 14, increased from the corresponding period last year, Comptroller Nolte reported today. Receipts rose from $15,119,442 to $15,573,805, an increase of $454,363, or 3 per cent. Expenditures increased from $13,777,901 to $14,115,956, an increase of $338,055, or 2½ per cent.

Current tax payment increased from $9,536,421 in the 1934-35 period to $10,248,379 in the first nine months of this year, a jump of $711,958, or 7 per cent. Payments of delinquent taxes decreased from $2,362,916 to $2,018,776, a drop of $344,140, or 14½ per cent. The decrease in back tax collections was attributed by the Collector's office to the fact that there were no waivers of penalties for back tax payments this year, as was the case last year. One of the largest increases has been in the fund for road and sinking fund charges on city bonds, which rose from $4,070,484 to $5,053,890, an increase of $1,073,472, or 26 per cent, due largely to higher rates and increased license and ad valorem tax payments on merchants' and manufacturers' licenses and an increase of half a cent a gallon in the city gasoline tax. Expenditures in most of the city departments showed an increase over the corresponding period of last year, although there was one large decrease of $149,257 in the item for election and registration expenses.

POLICE FIRE AT TRUCK AND CAPTURE ROBBER

Youth Caught Near Scene After Victim Telephones Report of Holdup.

Robbed of his truck early today, M. J. Corcoran, a Kroger grocery driver, ran to a telephone and notified police, who captured the robber as he was driving the truck a few blocks away.

Corcoran identified the prisoner, who said he was Jesse Ditch, a 19-year-old bundle wrapper, as the man who held him up, with one hand thrust in a pocket, as he was unloading his truck at 4067 Union boulevard. The prisoner was unarmed but a 50-cent piece found in his pocket was identified by the truck driver as his.

Corcoran told police he ran when the robber attempted to get him to board the truck saying he was to be taken on "a nice long ride." Police in a radio car fired several shots at the truck before the robber jumped from it in the 6600 block of Shulte avenue.

20 BUS PASSENGERS HURT IN CRASH WITH COAL TRUCK

Seven Seriously Injured at Middletown, Conn., on New York-to-Springfield Line.

By the Associated Press.
MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Jan. 21.—
Twenty bus passengers were injured, seven of them seriously, when the vehicle crashed into a loaded coal truck at a street intersection here today. The bus was bound from New York to Springfield and Haverhill, Mass.

The seven persons most seriously hurt were admitted to Middlesex Hospital. Six others were treated there and discharged.

The driver of the bus, Herman
M. Turrell, 27 years old, of Springfield, Mass., his wife, and the driver of the coal truck, Joseph Derlenzo, 30, of New Haven, were not injured.

Both drivers were arrested on charges of violating the rules of the road. Derlenzo was charged additionally with failure to carry flares.

STEERING COMMITTEE FOR MAYOR'S FACTION

Named to Obtain Dickmann Delegates to State and National Conventions.

A political steering committee to handle the interests of Mayor Dickmann's faction of the Democratic party, with the primary task of endeavoring to have friendly St.
Louis delegates to the State and national conventions selected, has been set up by the Mayor.

The personnel chosen by Dick-mann was: Assessor Ralph Coale, chairman; Robert E. Hannegan, who was ousted as head of the Democratic City Committee last June by the majority faction opposed to the Mayor, and State Senators Michael Kinney and Joseph
H. Brogan. Hannegan, Kinney and Brogan are members of the pro-Dickmann minority of the city committee. Coale, Brogan and Kinney are veterans in politics.

Statements by Coale.

Coale said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that Mayor Dickmann wanted to devote his time to giving the city a "business administration," and that the Mayor's group was not fighting any other, but wanted to protect Dickmann's political interests. It has been expected that Dickmann would seek re-election next year, and in the meantime, to build up his political strength, he has wanted to be a factor in this year's general election campaign.

Ward mass meetings will select the party's delegates to the State convention. At the State gathering the delegations from the various congressional districts, including the three in St. Louis, will caucus for selection of district delegates to the national convention, subject to approval of the general State meeting. The State convention also will pick eight delegates-at-large to the national.

As the initial step in this pyramid of action, the Mayor's forces will try to muster majorities of friendly Democrats at the various ward gatherings.

Action in 18th District.

Efforts of the steering committee will be concentrated particularly in the North Side Thirteenth Congressional District, where John J. Cochran, who has been suggested by some of Dickmann's opponents as a candidate for Mayor, is Congressman. The anti-Dickmann group has had its greatest strength in this district, where the leaders have included former Congressman William L. Igoe and Justice of the Peace Jimmy Miller, Fourth Ward boss.

Three Democratic committeemen of this district who voted for the ouster of Hannegan have been counted on by the steering committee to help Dickmann in the new movement. They were Thomas H.
Quinn, Constable in Jimmy Miller's court; City Marshal Lilburn G. May and William Cullinane. When the Mayor discharged about 160 city employees in reprisals against opposition committeemen, he expelled Quinn's and May's wards. May has said his vote against Hannegan was on personal grounds.
Quinn was the only anti-Dickmann committeeman at a meeting called by the Mayor to support the Jefferson Memorial bonds.

In other wards where committe-men or Aldermen have opposed Dickmann, the steering committee will work through the administration's independent organizations.
Similar activities will be carried on in the Twelfth District, which includes St. Louis County, and in the Eleventh District.

Factional Dispute.

There was a movement in the City Committee prior to the special election last September on the Jefferson Memorial bonds, which were advocated by Dickmann, to defeat the issue. At the last minute, at least partly because of the intercession of Igoe, the committee decided to support the bonds, particularly in the so-called "delivery wards."
Politicians have conceded that the proposal would have been defeated without this support. Efforts since then to heal the factional breach have failed. There has been an apparent disposition among the anti-Dickmann majority faction of the Board of Aldermen to wait for the Mayor to come to them to obtain passage of the pending bill for is-surance of the first of the bonds.
The memorial situation has been figuring strongly in the political background.

Coale told the reporter the steering committee would not make informations of candidates for nominations in the August primary "at

WIDOW ON TRIAL TOMORROW IN KILLING OF HER HUSBAND

Mother-in-Law Expected to Testify for Prosecution in Case at Memphis, Tenn.

By the Associated Press.
MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 21.—The trial of Daisy Alexander Root on a charge of killing her husband, Brenton Root, over a cigarette girl, was postponed yesterday at request of defense, until tomorrow. Root's parents have employed a lawyer to aid the prosecution, it was learned yesterday.

A few days after Root was shot at his home here Nov. 3, his father, the Rev. Benjamin Franklin Root of Chicago, expressed sympathy for the young widow and offered her a place in his home "after this trouble is over."
Recent developments have indicated he has changed his mind. He is here to testify for the prosecution that young Root loved his wife and spent much time making plans for their home.

BUDWEISER FIVE TOTALS 3435 TO LEAD TEAMS IN CLASSIC LEAGUE

Ray Newton, a member of the Budweisers, first champion in the Classic Bowling League, established a new high three-game record for St. Louis in the first round of the second-half season on the Rogers alley last night, when he totaled 799, the results of counts of 253, 289 and 257.

Three other bowlers counted better than 700: Harold Schaefer, Newton's teammate, had 773, with 260 for high game; Buzz Wilson, a new member of the Hermanns, totaled 765, while Ambrose Nahe of the Silver Seals finished with 734.

Team rolling also was of the sensational variety, with six of the eight quintets going over the 3000 figure. The Budweisers were the leaders, with 3435, the result of counts of 1206, 1145 and 1084. This big total enabled the team to win two out of three from the Hermanns, with 3219. The Hermanns totaled 1118 to win the final game, with 343, 289 and 446.

The Silver Seals totaled 3277, against 3021, to win three straight from the Old Judge boys. Aside from Nahe's big 700, Frank Boehm totaled 662 for the winners and Wolkstein 661. Mulkenberry was high for the losers, with 697.

A 3070 score enabled the Charles J. Krohn to win three straight from the Alhoffs. Jim Wilson topped the Krohn, while Joe Walsh was high for the losers, with 343. The With Flowers, with 3011, won two out of three from the Rogers, Tonkovic and Kenny were the team leaders.

Two Wrestlers Signed.

Working on details for his next wrestling show, which is scheduled for Jan. 30 at the Coliseum, promoter Bill Schwabe yesterday announced that he had signed up two men for preliminary events. They were the rough-and-tumble Tiger Burman, a local light-heavyweight, and Jack Madams, Chicago, mid-dleweight. Opponents for the men have not been named as yet.

MANY STARS ARE AVAILABLE FOR LOCAL SURVIVOR IN SOCCER SERIES

By Dent McSkimming

In addition to some very excellent but not entirely proved amateur talent among the Municipal League players, there are still available at least a half-dozen good soccer players who have not been "cup-tied" and who might be signed by the club which survives in the St. Louis area for later matches in the national championship competition. Under the rules of the competition, a player who engages in a match may not be transferred later to another club.

Among the better players who have not participated with their teams are Dinty Moore, Al Benoit, Ralph Tracy, Art Garcia, Sam Ducker and Ray Egan. In addition, Larry Kiekham and Joe O'Meara of the Ben Millers are not scheduled to play with their club when it meets Sparta at Chicago next Sunday and they may stay here. This list of eligibles to transfer, Joe Stratmann, star left-winger, might also be included, but there is now some question as to his future club connection. It is reported that he has appealed to the United States Football Association office in an effort to obtain his outright release from the Ben Miller club.

Eddie Begley, Cecil Rodriguez, Milt Zenson, Tom Erbe and Ollie Kind are out of the most attractive of the municipal leagues, who might help a cup competition survivor. Thus, in the matter of player talent the local teams appear to be better fortified than in the past.

The practice of holding out useful players from early round games and then transferring them to the ultimate St. Louis survivor has helped several clubs in the past. Tom Erbe and Joe Hennessey helped the Stix club reach the national final; Larry Kiekham almost put the Marres into the Western final; Johnny Hamm gave the Centrals a tremendous lift when he replaced the injured Central goalkeeper, Jim McGowan, last season.

One of the remarkable features of this practice in the past is that in every case it was the Ben Miller club that provided the individual stars that helped the cup survivor. The Miller organization has been consistently fortunate in picking up fine players but has not had much luck in recent years in welding them into a winning combination.

Burkes Have Slim Chance.

National Challenge Cup rules specifically cover the point upon which the Burke club based its protest of its defeat at the hands of the Marres, on Jan. 12. Players registered 14 days prior to the date set by the committee for the playing of the game are eligible for first round matches. The committee set the date Jan. 19 for the first round and the player in question, Bud Ross, was signed by the Marre club on Jan. 5, the records show, and thus was eligible, although the match was played a week earlier.

There is scheduled, The Burkes thus appear to have no chance to win a protest.

Extra Time Rule.

Secretary James Armstrong of the U. S. F. A. has been requested to give an official interpretation of Cup Rule XV, which covers the playing of extra periods in the event of a tie score. The rule reads: "In all games preceding the semifinal round an extra period of 30 minutes shall be played where the score is tied at the end of the regular 90 minutes."

There is some question whether that applies to first round games or only to games immediately preceding the semifinals. That would mean second round games only.

Time Out! See where the investigation into the late lamented war has been halted on account of a lack of the sinews of war.

It was a summer evening, Old Kaspar's work was done; His little grandson, Peterkin, To question had begun: "Now tell us all about the war, And what they fought each other for."

"It was the banks," Kaspar cried, "Of that there is no doubt; But what they fought each other for, I could not well make out; I'd like to know myself," said he, "I'll take it up with old J. P."

The Militant Minority.

That gallant little band of optimists who warned the Joe Louis fans not to be too sure that the Retzlaff fight was in the bag are now waiting for Connie Mack to pull a rabbit out of the old derby.

The swift snuffing out of Retzlaff has served only to whet Jim Braddock's appetite for a meeting with the Bomber. He is entirely within his rights, the Supreme Court having ruled that whistling in the park is not in conflict with the United States Constitution.

Meanwhile Mike Jacobs, who cast an anchor to windward by taking out an option on Retzlaff's services, just in case, has taken out a life insurance on Charley and is open for bids.

Realizing the importance of an A. No. 1 battery, the Browns started the season by signing Rolfe Hemmley and Ivy Paul Andrews. Looks like first division!

Roosevelt Beats Central Swimmers By 1-Point Margin

Only one point separated Roosevelt and Central High School swimming teams after they had completed a program of eight events at the Downtown Y. M. C. A. pool yesterday afternoon.

Central's relay team, swimming the 120-yard medley event, captured the closing event of the card to pull up to within a single point, gaining 10 points, McKinley won, 40 to 39.

McKinley swimmers had a much easier time in defeating Cleveland in a similar meet at the same pool. With Bob Kennedy in the star role, gaining 10 points, McKinley won, 40 to 39.

COX WINS FROM BILL MEHLHORN IN PLAYOFF OF GOLF TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.
SACRAMENTO, Cal., Jan. 21.—Wiffy Cox proved today a seven on a par-four hole should never discourage a golfer.
Cox had such a hole yesterday and still beat Wild Bill Mehlhorn, Louisville, Ky., in a playoff for $750 first money in the Sacramento open golf tournament.
The Bethesda (Md.) professional suffered a seven on the 431-yard fourth hole after hooking his second shot into a hedge. He came back on the 545-yard thirteenth to hole a 35 yard approach for his eagle.
Mehlhorn, tied with Cox at the end of 72 holes Sunday, struggled along almost even with the former sailor to that point and although he tried gallantly thereafter, doing his best to sink an ace at the short eighteenth, he never caught up.
The play-off ended with Cox shooting a 74, two over par, against 77 for Mehlhorn, whose putter frequently failed him.
Cox made victory doubly sure by holding a 25-foot putt for a deuce on the par three eighteenth. Wild Bill sent his tee shot on the 145-yard hole, within 12 feet on the pin, but could not sink his first putt.

FASCIST TROOPS CONTINUE ADVANCE

Ras Desta Demtu Said to Have Barely Escaped Capture in Battle on Southern Front.

By the Associated Press.
ROME, Jan. 21.—The Italian Government's war communique reported today the loss of a Fascist bombing plane on the northern Ethiopian front.
The communique follows:
"Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's troops continue mopping up Ras Desta Demtu's fleeing warriors.
"On the Eritrean front one of Ras Seyoum's lieutenants submitted his men to our authorities at Agula.
"In the Andino region, southwest of Makale, a bombing plane has fallen.
"The official Italian News Agency, Stefani, reported from Dolo that Ras Desta had barely escaped capture by the Italians. Dolo, it was reported, had fled by muleback and truck, accompanied by followers. His brother was said to have been killed.
Stefani said captured Ethiopians declared Desta's army was broken. League Council Refuses to Send Commission to Front.
GENEVA, Jan. 21.—The League of Nations Council yesterday rejected a plea from Emperor Haile Selassie to send a commission of inquiry to the Ethiopian war zone and to give the empire financial aid.
In its note, Ethiopia said: "Ethiopia is learning the cruel lesson that small peoples must rely chiefly upon themselves to defend their independence and integrity."
The Committee of Thirteen—which is the council without Italy and Ethiopia—turned down the financial request on the ground that the League convention for providing financial aid for the victim of aggression had never gone into force. It characterized as "inopportune" the request for a commission of inquiry.
In its new note Ethiopia said "laws of humanity have been flouted by the aggressor, ambulances consistently bombarded and prohibited poison gases profusely used."
Ethiopia asked "if the League considers that the aggressor must not be allowed to succeed, should not members of the League, acting in concert, show their force in such a way as to demonstrate that aggression does not pay?"
"Ethiopia is aware that certain governments hesitate to take steps which might involve them in a conflict that does not seem to concern them directly; they fear to come up against a powerful aggressor who declared himself determined to let loose a universal war."

TINKHAM ATTACKS PRESIDENT ON HIS LEAGUE STAND
Reads Into Congressional Record Remarks He Says Show "Lack of Intellectual Conviction."
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Representative Tinkham (Rep., Massachusetts), put into the Congressional Record last night a series of excerpts from public remarks of President Roosevelt on the League of Nations which he said showed the "lack of intellectual conviction" by the President.
Tinkham told newspaper men that the statements "show that from 1920 until he became a candidate for President in 1932, President Roosevelt was in an extreme partisan for United States adherence to the League of Nations."
"In 1932, when Mr. Roosevelt became a candidate for President, he stated for the first time his opposition to American adherence to the League of Nations."
"After Mr. Roosevelt was elected President, he was an aggressive promoter of United States entry into the League Court, which had been demonstrated beyond denial as a political subsidiary of the League and a part of the League of Nations machinery."

Russia's Largest Military Budget Voted Through With Enthusiasm

Blouses, Meet in Modernly Refurnished
Kremlin, Former Palace of Czar.

(Copyright, 1936, New York Tribune, Inc.)
MOSCOW, Jan. 21.—There is an especially appropriate touch about the snow flurries which have been veiling the towers of the Kremlin during the past few days during the meetings of the Tsik, the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R. Beneath the low winter sky and snow these ancient battle mounds take on an air of gloom and mystery associated with things which politics cannot corrode nor revolutions change, and this is peculiarly fitting for events which have been taking place within the "eat palace."
Many things about the Kremlin today, such as the chromium-plated elevators and proletarian committees in rough khaki blouses, might trouble the spirits of those who once frequented this hill. There would be some consolation, however, in listening to the discussions. They have been devoted mainly to passing, with frequent eruptions of enthusiasm, the largest military budget the Russians have ever seen. In the halls where the Czar's nobles and warriors once assembled to swear fealty to the idea of militant pan-Slavism, the less decorative leaders of the "New Russia" have been thrilling to tales of Japanese and German dangers and voting that Socialism, for its supposed defensive needs, shall build one of the greatest war machines in the world.
Stalin's Name Always Cheered.
During the sessions of the Tsik, the surest way any orator could bring the audience to its feet cheering was to mention the name of Joseph Stalin—who was present only about half of the time—and the next surest was to mention the war budget and the Red army. Even without these dramatics the scene has been impressive, if only for its contrasts. New York, Paris, London and Rome each have their characteristic beauties, but Red Square and the Kremlin on a winter night in a snowstorm is a sight that Western and Southern eyes may admire and probably never can understand.
The mystery, however, must be left outside. Inside the great Kremlin Palace these days all is bright new plaster and woodwork, shining elevators and modernistic chandeliers. The Hall of St. Andrew, which the Czar after Nicholas I used as a throne room, and the Alexander Room have been torn together to provide a hall for the Tsik. Around the walls on tall wood stands, looking strangely like the confession boxes in St. Peter's Cathedral, are 16 loudspeakers. Four large flash-light beams on every speaker as he mounts the rostrum and when the world's most indiscriminate photographers run out of speakers, they turn their lenses on the audience. The Tsik's 650 members, almost as many women as men, and about the same many guests, are admitted to the sessions.
Upstairs there is a buffet where food is half the regular price.
Organized Better in Rome.
Except for army officers wearing a new insignia of rank, there is nothing in the scene which could be compared with old time splendors, for among the delegates khaki blouses predominate although this crowd is also composed of the elite. When Premier Benito Mussolini enters the Chamber of Deputies in Rome, every one rises with a Fascist salute and gives a rhythmic "Duce, Duce," led by the secretary of the Fascist party.
Here when Stalin appears, the crowd also rises but instead of organized cheering, there is an outburst which the newspapers call "Hurrah," although it sounds more like a deep throated bellow.
The Fascists may have an official cheer leader but their parliament hasn't anything over the Tsik when it comes to putting through war budgets and other administration plans in an atmosphere of emotional enthusiasm and without any discouraging elements of critical debate.

SECURITY ACT SUCCESS UP TO ADMINISTRATORS TO MULLEN REPORTED

Stress This Point; Selection
"On Merit" Urged.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—A $58,204,100 deficiency appropriation bill to take the place of the $103,272,705 measure, which failed of passage last session, was laid before the House today by the Appropriations Committee. About two-thirds of the total, or $45,850,000, would go to finance the Social Security Act until next June 30.
The bill was $3,854,543 under this year's budget estimates. Of the social security allowance, $40,985,000 would be for grants to states.
Total Federal grants to states for the first six months of this year under the Social Security Act are estimated at $64,500,000, in a report of hearings before the House subcommittee on deficiency appropriations.
John G. Winant, chairman of the Social Security Board, had testified that $52,500,000 would be needed for assistance to the aged, $4,000,000 for the blind and $8,000,000 for children's aid.
Winant said 13 states—Delaware, Idaho, Maine, Iowa, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Vermont, Wisconsin and Wyoming—have qualified for old age assistance. Twelve other states are expected to win quick approval of their plans. The Government will grant up to $1 a month for needy aged, provided states match the payments.
Arthur J. Altmeyer, member of the board, said there were about 7,000,000 persons more than 65 years old in the country, but probably only about 1,000,000 of them would qualify for pensions.
Missouri is to get $900,000 of Federal funds for the aged, according to the present program.
BANKRUPTCY BILL PASSES
House Approves Measure Giving Corporations More Protection.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The House passed yesterday the Perkins bill designed to make it more difficult to force bankruptcy reorganization of a business.
The measure, which goes to the Senate, provides that before a corporation may be compelled by its creditors to reorganize, they must hold at least 5 per cent of the concern's indebtedness, and in no case less than $1000. The present law provides that three or more creditors holding $1000 indebtedness may force the reorganization if the indebtedness is not met.

DIET DISSOLVED IN JAPAN; GENERAL ELECTION FEB. 20

Action Follows Non-Confidence Vote Against Premier Okada — Foreign Policy Not Affected.

By the Associated Press.
TOKYO, Jan. 21.—The Japanese Diet was dissolved today after a resolution of non-confidence in the Government was introduced in the lower House. A general election was called for Feb. 20.
The non-confidence resolution was proposed by the Seikukai majority party, unfriendly to the administration of Premier Okada, who announced dissolution of Parliament. Japan's foreign policy will not be affected.
The dissolution followed a speech by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, who expounded a three-point program for the "readjustment of relationships between Japan, Manchukuo and China."
He urged the "proper adjustment" of relations between Japan, Manchukuo and the Soviet Union; called attention to the "excessive military works" which, he said, Russia has erected in Eastern Siberia; and asserted the "friendly policy" of Japan toward the United States and Great Britain would not be changed by developments at the London naval conference. Japan last week withdrew from the five-power parity when its demand for fleet equality was refused.
Policy Toward China.
Hirota said the three-point Japanese policy toward China was:
(1) Halting by China of "all unfriendly acts and measures" and the beginning of China's "active and effective collaboration with Japan."
(2) Chinese recognition of Manchukuo—"the two countries should open diplomatic intercourse and harmonize their interests."
(3) Suppression of Communist activities and "liberation of China from the Red menace."

PITTMAN ON NEUTRALITY BILL Says Legislation Will Be Enacted as Roosevelt Wants It.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Assurances of the enactment of neutrality legislation "substantially" in the form desired by the administration, given to President Roosevelt today by Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Pittman predicted the committee would report the legislation to the Senate within two weeks.
He said he did not think the cessation of hearings by the munitions investigating committee would interfere with enactment of a permanent neutrality law.

The lawyers had their day in court, twice in New York and once before a Federal Judge in their own locality. In New York they lost their case, and in Minnesota Judge Sanborn dismissed the test case without requiring the grain corporation to present its side after the attorneys had submitted their evidence.
The claimants are operators of grain elevators, both private individuals and farmers' associations. Cochran said that both Presidents Coolidge and Hoover had rejected the claim.
Cochran referred to the Minnesota fire case in which Congress at the last session authorized payment of from $9,000,000 to $11,000,000 for claims against the Government corporation that operated the railroads during the war. A spark from a train is supposed to have set fire to a drouth-stricken area in Minnesota. The fire swept over a large area and did considerable damage.
10 Per. to Lawyers.
The claim in the Minnesota fire case was also repeatedly turned down, Cochran said. Checks are now going out to the claimants. A provision in the bill limits the amount which lawyers may be paid to 10 per cent.
"The attorneys, of course, will get 10 per cent," Cochran said of the claim of the elevator operators, "and if Congress does not limit the fee it might run up to 50 per cent. What should have been done at the time was to refer this case to the Department of Justice to see if a conspiracy had not been entered into to defraud the Government."
Cochran also opposed numerous Indian claims originating in California. These two were engineered by lawyers, Cochran charged. As chairman of the committee on expenditures in executive departments he has long fought the Indian claims.

EASTMAN FAVORS 'PRESSURE' TO FORCE RAIL CO-ORDINATION

His Annual Report Says He Has Laid Groundwork for Action by Government.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman said today he had laid the foundation for the application of Government "pressure" to compel railroad co-ordination.
Discussing a policy of promoting co-operation, co-ordination and gradual unification, Eastman said in his annual report that difficulties in the way of collective action are so great "that outside pressure from governmental authority is a very necessary ingredient. The groundwork has been laid by the co-ordinator and his staff for the application of such pressure from now on in steadily increasing degree."

The report disclosed conflict between the views of Eastman and the Interstate Commerce Commission on Eastman's proposal to reorganize the ICC. Eastman also called for establishment of his office on a permanent basis, extension of ICC authority over water carriers and the provision of dismissal compensation for employees displaced by co-ordination. Such a program, he said, would necessitate reorganization. He suggested membership be increased from 11 to 16, with one member as a co-ordinator and five as a central "control board."
In a letter accompanying the report, the ICC said that such a reorganization "would not be in the interest of efficiency or economy and should not be made."

Ruling on Expenses of Curators.
Special to the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 21.—Members of the board of curators of Lincoln University, Negroes, in Jefferson City, are not entitled to reimbursement by the State for traveling expenses outside Missouri, nor to travel expenses for a distance greater than that between their homes and Jefferson City, in attending board meetings, the Attorney-General's department ruled today. The ruling rejected a contention by Dr. William J. Thompson of Kansas City, Negro member of the board, that he was entitled to traveling expenses from Washington, D. C., to Jefferson City and return, in connection with a board meeting here. Thompson holds a Federal appointment in Washington.

ANTI-FRENCH RIOTING IN DAMASCUS, SYRIA

Police and Troops Raid Nationalists' Offices and Meetings; Exile Leader.

By the Associated Press.
BEIRUT, Syria, Jan. 21.—Two French soldiers were wounded and trolley cars were stoned in street fighting which broke out in Damascus today as a result of a French campaign to suppress the nationalistic bloc.
Damascus was filled with troops after the French authorities raided the closed offices of the bloc in Damascus and Aleppo and exiled the nationalistic leader, Fakray Baroudi.
A thousand women gathered in Damascus to honor the dead Nationalist leader, Hanano, but police broke up the meeting and arrested 100 Syrian university students went on strike.
The disorders began as the trial of 39 members of the new Syrian Nationalist party was approaching. The trial has been set for Thursday. Among the defendants is a naturalized citizen of the United States, of Syrian birth, Fouad Mouffarej, formerly of New York. The trial will be based on the charge that the party was organized as a secret society and was not registered according to French laws.
The authorities are investigating allegations that the group is supported by Germany, Italy or Soviet Russia.
The exiled Baroudi was banished to "forced residence" in the upper corner of Djisreh, the region in the northeast extremity of Syria, which is farthest from Damascus. Troops patrolled the streets of Damascus after the rioting.

AS CONGRESS SUCCUMBS.

For a President to give assent at last to the pressure of a minority group would be disconcerting. It would show that, in a matter of national import, he was not acting in the national interest. Congress is moved by sectional and group influences. If somewhere in the national Government we have not a voice deaf to sectional and group appeals when the national interest is involved, it means the Treasury is at the mercy of pressure groups. It means that true democracy is imperiled.

The DAILY WASHINGTON

MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. APPOINTMENT of Prof. William O. Douglas, Yale, as new member of the Securities and Exchange Commission is expected to put backbone into an organization which recently has been meeting on its momentum.

Chairman Jim Landis, the savage liberal whose shadow once sent jitters down the spine of Wall Street, now is suspected of eating caviar a little too frequently with the boys whom once he frightened.

Other members of the commission have been leaning in the same direction. Douglas has been leaning directly opposite.

Although he was once associated with one of Wall Street's most prosperous law firms, Douglas has been SEC's most crusading investigator. His investigations of the bondholders' protective committees for the Frisco and Missouri Pacific Railways were sensational.

Douglas walked his way through the University of Washington, in Seattle, by living in a tent and washing his own clothes in an adjacent stream.

After graduation, he arrived in New York via the freight car route with 35 cents in his pocket, and applied for a loan to enter the Columbia Law School. His record at Washington was so good that he got a small loan and sold papers in Manhattan in order to meet the rest of his expenses.

Graduating near the top of his class, Douglas was immediately "snapped up" by the law firm of Paul Cravath. Later he became the highest paid law professor in the country, drawing $18,000 a year from Yale.

Statis.

AFTER all the effort exerted by Henry P. Fletcher to get his Republican National Committee radio skit on the air, Henry could not hear it when finally it was put on by a Chicago radio station.

He sat at home and turned the dial, but nothing happened. The Columbia Broadcasting Co. had been adamant in barring the G. O. P. skit from the air. But the voice of Chairman Fletcher sitting at home unable to listen in on his cherished skit was more than even Columbia could bear.

It sent Clyde Hunt, radio engineer who handles Roosevelt's broadcasts, around to the Fletcher home. He fixed the radio—gratis.

When Henry Wallace called farm leaders to advise him on a substitute AAA, he included almost every farm organization in the country except the one which represents the largest number of farmers.

Representatives of the tenant farmers, applying for help to the Wallace farm leader conference at the last minute, were turned down. As the reason for this veto, Wallace gave the lack of a large enough room in which to meet. However, the auditorium where sat his 100 delegates has a capacity of 1000.

Wallace's delegates represented approximately 3,000,000 farmers who own their own land and produce

General Johnson's Article

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. HOOVER has done it. He has proposed an agricultural program better for farmers than the administration "Soil Conservation" scheme. (1) no product control (2) prohibitive tariff on competitive products, (3) bilateral treaties to restore export markets, (4) outright subsidy of farm prices.

Complete in all its principal parts, it was proposed in this column many days ago as what the Republicans would do if the Democrats didn't.

As farmers come to understand the program, farm support for the administration will weaken. It leaves them free, does not insure a new judicial upset, retains their foreign trade and is made certain of effect through direct subsidy—in complete and advantageous contrast to the administration plan.

A majority of farmers are congenial Republicans anyway. All these facts combined are very serious matters for Mr. Roosevelt.

Nearly all of Mr. Hoover's devastating debate and discussion was anticipated by this column, parts of it almost verbatim—but

OTTO H. DIECKMANN FUNERAL

Services at 2 P. M. Thursday for Otto H. Dieckmann, assistant general superintendent of the Brown Shoe Co., who died yesterday of heart disease at his home, 4109 North Taylor avenue, will be held at 2 P. M. Thursday at the Schumacher undertaking establishment, 4834 Natural Bridge avenue, with burial in Zion Cemetery.

Mr. Dieckmann, who was 51 years old, collapsed before leaving his home to go to the offices of the shoe company with which he had been connected 23 years. Yesterday was about 86 per cent of the country's farm products. Unrepresented were about 3,000,000 farm tenants who produce only 14 per cent of the country's farm goods; also about 3,000,000 agricultural workers.

These two groups have benefited little from the AAA; many tenant farmers have been evicted as a result of the crop curtailment program.

Blow-Up.

A BIG blow-up is brewing behind the scenes in the six-month-old Bituminous Coal Commission, which may end it from stem to stern even before the expected Supreme Court's ascends.

Cause of the undercover churning is Commissioner George E. Akeret, a lawyer from California. So bitter has feeling become that several important executives are threatening to resign and issue public statements denouncing Akeret.

Akeret's special province is the legal work of the commission. To assist him in this he has a large staff of lawyers.

Akeret has been at loggerheads with fellow officials on the commission from the start. One of his first acts was to elect himself vice-chairman when most of the other commissioners were out of town. He has repeatedly clashed with his colleagues on policy issues, particularly the question of price-fixing, which he favors, while most of the others believe it should be handled cautiously.

The commissioner owes his job to Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, who took him into his law firm last year after patching up a peace with Upton Sinclair. Akeret, a Sinclair lieutenant, was the EPIC candidate for the California Supreme Court.

In addition to these qualifications, Akeret's background includes war-time service in the aviation corps, a term as city attorney of Venice, Cal., and an inconspicuous part in the prosecution of the famous Centralia (Wash.) I. W. W. cases a decade ago. Until he came to Washington he was unknown outside of California.

Note: California produces no coal.

View Is Challenged.

This view was challenged by Charles P. Williams, a former Associate City Counselor and former lecturer on equity jurisprudence in the Washington University School of Law, who said that the nature of present day governmental problems was causing many thoughtful students of political affairs to question whether the framers of the Constitution did not make a mistake when they attempted to divide sovereignty between a central government and the states.

Taking the view that the United States is, in fact, one nation and not 48 nations, Williams cited natural resource industries and agriculture as fields of economic endeavor with which state power cannot adequately cope. Agreeing that a change in the Constitution which would permit control of natural resources and conditions of labor by the Federal Government would "cut profoundly into the power of the states as we know them," he said that any change should be attempted "logically and squarely by amendment and not by indirectness."

Williams, who laughingly described himself as "devil's advocate" in the discussion, suggested that some explanation of the Roosevelt administration's attempt to legislate nationally in matters not within the scope of Congress might be found in the President's conversations with John Maynard Keynes, British economist, concerning economic and social reforms undertaken by the British Parliament, which differs essentially from the American Congress in that the Parliament is a sovereign power.

Representation in Senate.

The one change which Cave would make in the original Constitution would be to change the equal distribution of seats in the Senate. He called attention to the fact that a state with 90,000 people has the same voting strength in the Senate as a state with 12,000,000, and regretted that the Constitution by its terms is unamendable in this respect.

Circuit Attorney Miller, conceding that there are problems not answered in terms of "state rights," said that no change should be made.

CONSTITUTION TOPIC OF PHI BETA KAPPAS

Dinner Discussion on Advantages of "Fundamentally" Amending It.

The Phi Beta Kappa Men's Club of St. Louis, whose members attained scholastic distinction in universities and colleges ranging geographically from the University of Nebraska to the University of Maine, held a dinner meeting at the University Club last night to listen to a discussion of the advisability of "fundamentally" amending the United States Constitution.

They heard, on the one hand, that any such change in the basic law would be the entering wedge of a national power which would be inevitable. This he said in effect was a result of changing economic conditions and the growing doubt as to the adequacy of state laws.

Wilbur B. Jones, lawyer, was elected vice-president and Charles H. Compton, assistant librarian of the St. Louis Public Library, secretary-treasurer. The new officers represent, respectively, the Washington University, Amherst and Phi Beta Kappa, Philo S. Stevenson, field secretary of Washington University, retiring secretary-treasurer of the club, introduced the discussion.

Rhodes E. Gave, former Circuit Judge, and retiring president of the club, opened the discussion with a rousing defense, for the most part, of the Constitution as it stands. Asserting that "there is no half-way point," he said that validation of the New Deal legislative program by constitutional change or restriction of the power of the Supreme Court would "destroy the very foundation on which our house is built."

INEZ GORMAN GETS ROLE IN WAGNERIAN COMIC OPERA

St. Louis Soprano to Take Part of Eva in "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."

Inez Gorman, St. Louis soprano, has been engaged for the leading prima donna role of Eva in a production of Wagner's comic opera "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," which will be presented in Cincinnati March 20 and 21, with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra playing.

Miss Gorman, in private life Mrs. James Stagliano, wife of a member of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Coulton Gorman of Boston. She is a niece of Col. and Mrs. H. D. McBride of St. Louis, with whom she resided a number of years. She studied music with her parents, both of whom are musicians, until she was 16 years old, when she won a scholarship at Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. She later appeared in recitals in the East, and was a member of the Municipal Opera chorus here in 1934.

Miss Gorman was chosen for the role of Eva last summer, when Robert Kraus of Cincinnati heard her in a recital at the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Mich. Frederick Jaeger of the Metropolitan will sing opposite her in the role of Walther.

Old-Time Troupers Are Helped in Their Efforts to Return to Footlights
BLONDES or BRUNETTES? By Dr. Wiggam

With Wales as King.
Real Spending Ahead.
Tribute to T. R.
Where Will It Start.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(Copyright, 1936.)

KING GEORGE V of England is dead. The world asks what kind of King the Prince of Wales will make.

Americans who have met the young man believe that he will follow the example set by his father.

When he was in America, the Prince was asked by this reporter which of all the English Kings, dead and gone, he would like to resemble. He made no definite choice, but his people would probably be well satisfied to have him follow in the footsteps of his father, King George.

If the soldiers get their bonus money, there will be some quick spending, enough to quicken the pulse of business while it lasts.

Four of New York City's counties alone, would each get $18,000,000 of the bonus money. King's County would get more than $45,000,000; the whole of New York would get $221,000,000, and throughout the country, other millions and hundreds of millions would be poured out.

Merchants will get more than $400,000,000 due on past accounts, and the observer will notice many new overcoats, dresses and automobiles.

At the dedication of New York's $5,000,000 memorial to the late Theodore Roosevelt, one speaker praised President Theodore Roosevelt as one who "saw the necessity for keeping both the legislatures and the courts in their proper places."

That perception showed a high spirit, but if some future Theodore Roosevelt should go too far in that direction it might become necessary for the legislatures and the courts to keep that President in his proper place.

Something unpleasant is bound to start somewhere on the earth, with all the new theories, new hatreds, new armaments, new deadly weapons. It might start on the border between Russia and Japan's Manchoukoo. When you read: "Russia uses force to halt Japanese," you know the explosion might come at any time.

All would regret bloodshed, but it would be historically interesting to see the ancient autocracy of the Mikado at war with the modern autocracy of Stalin. It would be a long fight, probably.

Mrs. Alinda French of St. Louis, 104 years old, attributes her long life to "hard work in her youth and a dutiful son in her old age." She is "not interested in pensions for the aged and not at all interested in politics: 'People get over that,' says she, 'after they reach 100.'"

Mrs. French sleeps 12 hours a night. That explains some of the 104 years.

The human race gets used to everything. Once our ancestors shivered, fell flat on their faces, when lightning flashed and thunder growled. They thought some demon was after them. Now men put up lightning rods, properly grounded.

Once the comet was considered an avenging messenger aimed straight at sinful man. Today its coming and going are understood and predicted, its path marked out.

In New York, on Sunday, in the midst of a heavy snowstorm, there came suddenly violent thunder and lightning, bursting through the snow. Such a strange phenomenon once would have been attributed to divine wrath and clergymen would have preached about it. Now it is referred to the Weather Bureau.

Nevertheless, we still do not know what happens when we leave here, and that ought to make us thoughtful, no matter how much we know about comets.

The Corning Glass Works, which made the giant astronomical lens, 200 inches in diameter, announces production of a frying pan made of glass. That would have interested the ancients, who first made glass accidentally, by building an intensely hot fire on sand.

Interesting to moderns is the fact that 1500 attempts to make a fire-resistant glass frying pan produced as a by-product a method of glass production that made the great telescope lens possible.

"Men have died, and worms have eaten them," and usually their power dies with them, as though they had never been.

Today's Democratic primary in Louisiana will tell whether the late Huey Long is completely dead, or partly alive. Louisiana's Governor tells his agents to tolerate no interference at the polls by agents from Washington, orders them "to kick them out."

Giving orders is one thing; executing them, another. Huey Long would have done it first, talked about it afterward. That was his strength.

ALL AFTER-SESSION SALES OF STOCKS MUST BE REPORTED

The board of governors of the St. Louis Stock Exchange has ruled that all trades between members in securities listed on the local exchange must be reported before the session the next morning. The purpose of this rule is to increase the volume of trading on the floor of the exchange, according to B. F. Jacobs, president of the Exchange.

NATIONAL OATS ELECTS TWO DIRECTORS; 25C DIVIDEND

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the National Oats held today, A. C. Carr and J. L. Cooper were elected to the board of directors, taking the places of J. C. Mathews and Gordon Finnell. All other directors were re-elected, and at the subsequent directors' meeting, all officers were re-elected. A dividend of 25 cents a share was voted stockholders of record Feb. 21, to be paid March 2.

ATLAS POWDER PLANS CHANGES

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 21.—A special meeting of Atlas Powder Co. stockholders will be held in Wilmington Feb. 24, to act on proposed amendments.

The amendments would reduce the preferred stock dividend rate, effective August 1, 1936, from 6 to 5 per cent, provide that no preferred stock may be called for redemption prior to Aug. 1, 1941, and provide for the privilege of conversion of preferred stock into common stock of the company at any time after Aug. 1, 1936, at the rate of one and one-half shares of common stock for each share of preferred stock.

A Simple Probability

A BLIND opening lead cannot always hit the bull's eye. As I have said before, the supermen of bridge reach double-dummy perfection in this important department only about 80 per cent of the time. Considering the obstacles to be overcome, this is a magnificent record.

The bidding:
West North East South
1 spade Double De'ble 2 hearts
Pass Pass 2 notr'p Pass
2 notr'p (final bid)

Shift.

The bidding was not particularly bad. North's take-out double was weak, of course, but against vulnerable opponents, and with a conservative partner, not greatly to be criticized.

South, with little information from the bidding, tried to hit his partner's probable suit by opening the eight of clubs. Dummy played the jack and North's king won.

At this point a shift was clearly indicated. Few players, indeed, could fail to recognize the opening lead for a short-suit opening, but even fewer, I fear, would have made the proper return. A heart lead to dummy's weakness was superficially persuasive but, on close analysis, unsound. In order to make three tricks in hearts, dummy would have to hold two honors. In diamonds, however, three tricks could be made by finding South with only one specific card—the queen. On this good reasoning, North shifted to the 10 of diamonds, and the jig was up for declarer. Now no line of play could deprive the defenders of three diamond and two club tricks, for the contract's defeat.

TODAY'S QUESTION.
Question: Has dummy the right to warn declarer he is about to play out of the wrong hand?

Answer: No. Dummy has no right to direct the play in any way.

Finger Marks
A few drops of ammonia will remove finger prints from mirrors, windows, locks, latches, etc., without having to clean the entire surface. Use on a soft cloth. This is a great help when there are children about as then little finger marks are apt to be found anywhere.

Comparative Virtues of Blonds and Brunettes

The Author of "Let's Explore Your Mind" Takes Up a Moot Problem

By Albert E. Wiggam, D. SC.

I RECEIVE several thousand letters every week. An enormous percentage of them are of course from young people; and I must confess to me a surprise that a very large percentage are inquiries about the different characteristics of blonds and brunettes. There is a widespread belief that the color of the skin is an index to some profound and permanent traits of character. Numerous letters begin: "I am a decided brunette. What type should I marry?" Do you think I would be happier if I married a blond or one of my own type?" Others read, "Do you think I can succeed as a salesman as I am of the blond type?" etc.

Nothing proves how business men swallow vast quantities of the good brick psychology that is now for sale on every news-stand both in books and magazines and the way people generally are gulled by this capacious nonsense than the fact that numerous firms actually hire their salesmen and office employees on the advice of "character reading experts" who depend on such outward marks as a blond or brunette skin or hair to determine an applicant's qualifications. There is one book written by a high priest of this sort of pseudo-scientific verbiage which has had an enormous sale and which has apparently been a decisive factor in the acceptance or rejection of many people for jobs. One of the chief claims made in this book, the preface to which is written by one of the most eminent business men of this generation, reads something like this:

"The normal blond, always and everywhere, has aggressive, dominating, active, hopeful, speculative and variety-loving characteristics; while the normal brunette has conservative, imitative, submissive, cautious, painstaking, plodding, thoughtful, specializing characteristics."

Now here is a straightforward positive statement which has profoundly influenced the lives of thousands of people but which is wide open to scientific investigation. This "psychology" heaven save the word—lists above clear cut characteristics of blonds and brunettes. Fortunately two distinguished psychologists, Dr. Donald G. Paterson, and Katherine L. Ludgate, of the University of Minnesota, decided to put these statements to the test of actual measurement. If a statement has not been submitted to measurement it is just as likely to be false as true because it is only when you measure a thing that you have science; in short it is only when you have measured a thing that you really know anything about it.

So what these investigators did was to have each of 94 educated men and women select two pronounced blonds and two pronounced brunettes of his or her acquaintance. This made 188 persons whom any one would without question term a blond and 188 typical brunettes. Then Drs. Paterson and Ludgate prepared a rating sheet on which the 26 characteristics were listed. They figured that if blonds "always" and "everywhere" possessed the blond traits the judges could mark them all plus on these traits and likewise they could mark the brunettes plus on all the traits they possessed "always and everywhere." If this should prove true then no blond would receive a plus mark as "conservative," "submissive," etc., and no brunette could possibly get a plus mark for being "active," "aggressive," "variety-loving" and the like. And the investigators also felt quite comfortable in assuming that if these characteristics were true always and everywhere for these two types then these Minnesota blonds and brunettes of this generation had surely not been overlooked by Dame Nature and had received from her even-handed justice their proper characteristics in due proportions.

But, either these Minnesota specimens were a strange exception or else they were "abnormal" instead of "normal" blonds and brunettes, for when these 94 judges had made their ratings the results were in absurd contradiction to this learned "doctor's" predictions. Almost exactly as many blonds as brunettes were rated plus on the blond traits and as many brunettes as blonds were rated plus on the blond traits! Only 63 per cent of the blonds show what blonds ought to show "always and everywhere" whereas 61 per cent of the brunettes show characteristics which brunettes are supposed to show never and nowhere. In fact both types ran ludicrously untrue to form.

And since all the characteristics of both types such as "conservative," "submissive," "variety-loving," "thoughtful," etc., are very good traits if possessed in proper degree by either husbands or wives, I think it quite safe to pay no attention to the color of the skin or hair in selecting a mate but you should ascertain just how much of these traits the individual in whom you are interested does possess and decide whether or not you would enjoy living with them. I think you can put up with the skin and hair color whatever it may be provided these other more important characteristics are satisfactory.

But this does not settle the question whether or not brunettes or blonds are the better salesmen. This same noted "Doctor" of "psychology" maintains that blonds are more of the go-getter type and make the best salesmen. Again a competent psychologist—that is a real for sure psychologist tested this matter. Doctor H. G. Kenagy of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, had 40 sales managers in 38 business organizations rate their four best salesmen on these 26 characteristics of blonds and brunettes. It turned out that out of 152 high production salesmen 82 were brunettes where as only 70 were blonds. Either this is a smashing disproof of all such claims about the characteristics of blonds and brunettes or else it means that the "aggressive," "active," "hopeful" man makes a poor salesman and that when you are looking for a high-powered salesman the "conservative," "submissive" type is the man you want to hire before he gets out of your office. By all means don't let such a man get away from you, especially if he has a blond complexion or yellow hair. Maybe a few freckles would add to his capabilities. And when it comes to hiring women for selling remember that Cleopatra had freckles and red hair while Catherine the Great of Russia had black hair and an ivory complexion and both of these girls were sure some sales ladies.

My DAY
by Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. (By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.) A few days ago a great airplane crashed in Arkansas. On it was a man who was Works Progress Administrator in the State of Arkansas.

The day he left on this trip he talked with his chief, Mr. Harry Hopkins, of plans for the future in that State. The next thing his chief knew about him was that he was dead.

Today at lunch Mr. Hopkins told me of his funeral, and somehow I think this man will really never die, for through his work he changed the lives of countless people.

His funeral was held in a building which he had built. Some 10,000 people came from all over the State, many of them so poor they must have hitch-hiked most of the way, but they were there to pay a last tribute to the man who had worked for them.

Under him 800 new rural schoolhouses were built in Arkansas. The road running past the cemetery where he lies buried was just finished under his direction.

A rural community, which he planned for the share-croppers, is working out successfully, and the Government will get its investment back again. It all cost money, yes, but it will mean better people, happier people, in the future of that State.

The man with the vision to plan, and the ability to direct it, has gone on, and whether the future remembers his name or not, makes little difference, for countless people will call him blessed, though they may never know the identity of the person who made it possible for them to be glad to live.

I was kept from going to West Virginia today, because they said I could not be sure of making my way through the snow, so I gained a full day with no engagements. It was like picking up a purse full of gold—but, of course, that isn't allowed today.

I had a most delightful time catching up on long-hand letters and even reading a volume of poems, which a friend of mine had sent me.

Learn the Right Way To Train Your Dog

COME, Jerry!" you call, and Jerry comes running, panting and eager to carry out your next command. Then how proud you are!

Such obedience is not a matter of accident. Nor is it a matter of the dog's intelligence alone. A dog should be trained by one person (not two or three) according to certain definite rules. The first rule is to get your dog's respect and confidence. Then start in with easy, specific commands such as "Come!" "Go!" "Lie down!" Always use the same words each time you give a command.

The rest of our full, fascinating lesson in dog-training is given in our 32-page booklet. Also instructions on correct feeding, house-breaking, grooming and keeping your dog healthy.

The Greater Pleasures in Taking Risks

Life Offers More Surprises for Those Unafraid of Chances.

By Elsie Robinson

LET'S be different this year! Let's be the selves we once wanted to be—the gay, impudent selves—the brave, reckless selves—the impulsive, generous selves—the trusting, friendly selves.

Let's be the selves we wanted to be before caution cooled us and selfishness hardened us and stupidity muddled us.

Let's be the selves we were meant to be—AND LET'S TAKE A CHANCE ON THOSE SELVES!

Let's take this year as a daring adventure, a red-blooded challenge, and not merely as 12 months of time.

That's the way we took life when we were young—and life was hot and swift and sweet because we took it that way.

Life was full of lovely surprises when we were young because we took a chance with it. Life leaped and sang, and danced and danced with stars wreathed in its hair, because we took chances with it and with ourselves.

Now life is safer, easier, more comfortable, perhaps—but so much duller. Life drags and crawls now—or sprawls motionless for dreary days.

Take a chance on life again! Take a chance on yourself again! TAKE A CHANCE ON LOVING!

People need love so much more than you realize. People are ready for love—ready to give and take love. And you need love. You are withered and cold for lack of love. You are like a cat that is closing in and in... crushing your heart. Dare to love! Dare to love abundantly, recklessly, joyously!

TAKE A CHANCE ON LAUGHING!

Don't be so afraid of joy. Don't be so afraid of pain. Let your life be a whirl of fun and laughter and joy and pain. Let laughter run through you and sweep you, and shake the dust from your tired mind and heart, as the spring wind runs through the apple and shakes the leaves of the young birches. LAUGH!

TAKE A CHANCE ON BELIEVING!

You've grown so cautious—so afraid of doubting and so bitter. Take a chance on faith again. Faith in life, faith in the Other Fellow, faith in Yourself—and in God. Don't wait until you find someone who's "deserving" of your faith. Don't wait until you have proven that people merit your trust and God is real enough for your belief. Take a chance on believing that goodness exists in everyone and God exists for us all!

Take a chance on FAITH!—ON BEING LAUGHED AT—AND ON BEING MADE A FOOL OF. You can't live life abundantly, yet perfectly. You can't find all the answers without making mistakes. And suppose you do? What's wrong with a mistake? S'matter of fact, we all learn ten times as much from our mistakes as from our successes.

Moreover, if you want popularity, if you want power (and who doesn't?) you'll find that Mistakes will open hearts which Success could never touch—and give you influence you can never gain by triumphs. Which do you love the more—the Shining Light—or the Horrible Example? The Horrible Example every time. Take a chance on being a fool—and all the other fools will open their hearts to you.

TAKE A CHANCE ON ME! Funny request? Maybe. But now's as good a chance to mention it as any. Here we are, going along together, you and I. Every day I write to you every day you read me (Or should I?) And always we're needing each other. And how I need you, you'll never know, partner. THEN LET'S GET TOGETHER! Take a chance and write to me! Bawl me out if you wish—whine or wheeze, grouch or peeve—but take a chance on our being friends—AND ILL BET YOU WON'T BE SORRY.

Is it a bargain? Then let's go!

I have no mother and daddy to tell them what to do. But, anyway, my sisters always have clean shirts and clothes for me to wear to school. Mrs. Carr, what shall I do to have a happier home? Maybe I could go to my aunts, but I am not

Good Mothers Are Assured Of Affection

By Angelo Patri

"LATELY Shirley has been bothering me. She is disobedient and when I correct her she talks back. I know I have not been as firm as I should have been with her, but I don't want to love me. I can't punish her and she hates me. But I don't know what to do with her unless I send her away to school."

"And allow somebody else to punish her and be hated?"

"O, they don't mind it so much from teachers. I know she must be trained, but I can't do it."

"I want to be a good mother, but I want to be the Angelo Patri good mother who holds her children's affection. I can't bear to see the child feel bad and that's the truth."

When did a good mother ever lose the affections of her children? Even the not-so-good ones retain that in spite of everything. But good mothers are assured of it. Allowing children to go to a loose end is not being a good mother. Quite the contrary. And children are quick to learn that weakness lies behind the slackness, and take advantage of it. The result is that the children are miserable and the mother is unhappy.

True discipline never turned a child against its mother or teacher. It requires sound health, treatment and the hurt that follows injustice, will leave their traces in the child's mind and color his attitudes. But fair, firm discipline never. Over and over we hear children say, "She is strict, but she is fair." In that situation they take what comes in the course of the day and hold no grudges.

Being a good mother is no easy matter. It requires sound health, complete self-control, seasoned spirit and the application of personal experiences to sudden emergencies. The mother's life is certain to be filled with sudden emergencies. Quick thinking, quick decisions, courage, faith, much trust in the goodness of all phases of life are needed, not once in a while, but every hour. Strength, both physical and mental, must uphold the good mother.

There is no strength in the spirit that falters at the sight of a weebone child. There is no real love in the attitude that says, "I cannot correct him because he might stop loving me." Love is all powerful and knows no such wavering. The right upbringing of a child is his mother's charge, and sufficient to the responsibility her strength must be.

Speak out clearly and let the child know that he is long. Direct him the right way. Make him go that way if it is necessary. Children turn from timidity toward bravery, courage and strength. They lean willingly on the one who possesses such soul qualities. They are human children, and in their crude stage of growth reach for the desirable thing without thought of right or wrong or future consequences. Later on when they learn that mother or teacher or guardian could have saved them a mistake they resent the attitude that allowed it.

A good mother stands up to her task and faces the unpleasant duties that arise daily. She patiently bears the tears and pouts and tempers when she must. She punishes the wrong-doer in the spirit of healing. She hides her own suffering to help her mistaken child. So she wins her title, Good Mother.

I AM one of the desperate clan, I guess. Would you please suggest some ways, through your column, for young girls to earn some money at home. I have high school facing me next year, and I need some money for clothes or books, unless I make some. I also need money for things I should have now.

IF YOU ASK My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

My husband and I are still very much in love after 10 years of married life. I am coming to you for advice as I am at my wife's for advice and solve my problem. We have stayed with my mother since our marriage, but my husband wants very much to go to housekeeping. I do not want to what to do as I do not want to hurt my husband. I have several children and, with times as they are now, am afraid to undertake a separate house as my husband has not a steady job.

I know if I go my mother will blame my husband for taking me away from her. We will not have very much to start housekeeping, but I know I can keep the house and children all right. I have figured that we can solve our problem.

My mother doesn't trust any man. She says they will get the best of a woman all the time. She doesn't like my husband. A T. Z.

I am sure your mother must have expected you to live your life with your husband, showing him the attention expected of a wife and planning your future with him and your children. There is no reason why she should take the attitude that she is sure he can take care of you, without your mother's financial aid and constant supervision.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE a coat trimmed in fitch fur. The coat is clean but the fur is very smoky-looking. I would like to know if you can tell me of any way I can clean the collar without having the whole coat cleaned. Will you kindly tell me, too, why the peaches on an upturned cake always stick, when the pan is well greased.

A DAILY READER.

The cleaning of the fur will be difficult, unless you can remove the fur from the coat, although there are cleaners who clean the material (the names of which I could not mention in the column), that might do it. If you can remove the collar, you can clean it very well by rubbing cornmeal through the fur, then shaking well, repeating if the collar does not easily lose its grime. If you can figure out any way to keep the sawdust cornmeal off the coat, by, perhaps, sewing a cloth closely around the collar, you may be able to clean it without getting too much of the meal on the coat.

Your oven is likely too hot—so burns the fruit.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM one of the desperate clan, I guess. Would you please suggest some ways, through your column, for young girls to earn some money at home. I have high school facing me next year, and I need some money for clothes or books, unless I make some. I also need money for things I should have now.

M. M. F.

I believe my "Occupations for Women" may have some good suggestions for you, as there is sufficient variety in the ways to make money to fit the ability and mental equipment, as well as taste, of nearly every woman. Send a self-addressed and stamped envelope for this if you would like it mailed to you.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

NOW I have come to you for some information. I am a stenographer 25 years old and have a lot of time on my hands. Could you give me the name of some girl's club I could join? I live in St. Louis.

LONELY JO-AN.

If you wish to join a non-sectarian club for girls, which has interesting activities such as athletics, classes in dramatic and music appreciation, dancing, study of the Bible and swimming, call Mrs. Brodie, superintendent Girls' Club, which meets in the Bishop Tuttle Memorial Building, at 1210 Locust street. Telephone Central 0247.

If you are Catholic and would like to join a Catholic club where you would have social life, apply to the Padua League, 2500 South Eighth street. The club meets once a month when they have supper. Telephone Grand 3638 for more information.

I have no mother and daddy to tell them what to do. But, anyway, my sisters always have clean shirts and clothes for me to wear to school. Mrs. Carr, what shall I do to have a happier home? Maybe I could go to my aunts, but I am not

By Angelo Patri

"LATELY Shirley has been bothering me. She is disobedient and when I correct her she talks back. I know I have not been as firm as I should have been with her, but I do want her to love me. I can't punish her and make her hate me. But I don't know what to do with her unless I send her away to school."

"And allow somebody else to punish her and be hated?"

"O, they don't mind it so much from teachers. I know she must be trained, but I can't do it. I want to be a good mother, but I want to be the good mother who holds her children's affection. I can't bear to see the child feel bad and that's the truth."

When did a good mother ever lose the affections of her children? Even the not-so-good ones retain that in spite of everything. But good mothers are assured of it. Allowing children to go to a loose end is not being a good mother. Quite the contrary. And children are quick to learn that weakness lies behind the slackness, and take advantage of it. The result is that the children are miserable and the mother is unhappy.

True discipline never turned a child against its mother or teacher. Unjust punishment, yes. Unjust treatment and the hurt that follows injustice, will leave their traces in the child's mind and color his attitudes. But fair, firm discipline never. Over and over we hear children say, "She is strict, but she is fair." In that situation they take what comes in the course of the day and hold no grudges.

Being a good mother is no easy matter. It requires sound health, complete self-control, seasoned spirit and the application of personal experiences to sudden emergencies. The mother's life is certain to be filled with sudden emergencies. Quick thinking, quick decisions, courage, faith, much trust in the goodness of all phases of life are needed, not once in a while, but every hour. Strength, both physical and mental, must uphold the good mother.

There is no strength in the spirit that falters at the sight of a weebegone child. There is no real love in the attitude that says, "I cannot correct him because he might stop loving me." Love is all powerful and knows no such wavering. The right upbringing of a child is his mother's charge, and sufficient to the responsibility her strength must be.

Speak out clearly and let the child know that he is wrong. Direct him the right way. Make him go that way if it is necessary. Children turn from timidity toward bravery, courage and strength. They lean willingly on the one who possesses such soul qualities. They are human children, and in their crude state of growth reach for the desirable thing without thought of right or wrong or future consequences. Later on when they learn that mother or teacher or guardian could have saved them a mistake they resent the attitude that allowed it.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

My husband and I are still very much in love after 10 years of married life. I am coming to you for advice as I am at my wits' end to try and solve my problem.

We have stayed with my mother since our marriage, but my husband wants very much to go to housekeeping. I just don't know what to do as I do not want to leave my mother and I want to do right by my husband. I have several children and, with times as they are now, am afraid to undertake a separate house as my husband has not a steady job.

I know if I go my mother will blame my husband for taking me away from her. We will not have very much to start housekeeping, but I know I can keep the house and children all right. I have figured that we can solve our problem.

My mother doesn't trust any man. She says they will get the best of a woman all the time. She doesn't like my husband. A TO Z.

I am sure your mother must have expected you to live your life with your husband, showing him the attention expected of a wife and planning your future with him and your children. There is no reason why she should take the attitude that she is deserted and neglected; she can be near you and you can have much of her companionship in this way.

Of course, if your husband has not made a living for his family and your mother continually has had to step in the breach and supply you with some of your necessities, she might feel that, as a matter of economy and living, it is unwise for you to move to yourselves. You will have to ask your husband if he is sure he can take care of you, without your mother's financial aid and constant supervision.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE a coat trimmed in fitch fur. The coat is clean, but the fur is very smoky-looking. I would like to know if you can tell me of any way I can clean the collar without having the whole coat cleaned. Will you kindly tell me, too, why the peaches on an upside down cake always stick, when the pan is well greased.

A DAILY READER.

The cleaning of the fur will be difficult, unless you can remove the fur from the coat, although there are cleaning fluids on the market (the names of which I could not mention in the column), that might do it. If you can remove the collar, you can clean it very well by rubbing cornmeal through the fur, then shaking well, repeating if the collar does not easily lose its grime. If you can figure out any way to keep the sawdust cornmeal off the coat, by, perhaps, sewing a cloth closely around the collar, you may be able to clean it without getting the rest of the coat soiled.

Your oven is likely too hot—so burns the fruit.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It would be nice if you could go to live at your aunt's home. At least, if I were you, I should confide my trouble and uneasiness to her, and perhaps she will see the need of creating a different environment for you. And, if she does, you will not have to ask her, perhaps, if you can come to live with her.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

THERE has been much discussion in your column lately concerning the supposed deficiency in chivalry of young men.

Let me quote a member of the weaker sex, Dr. Olga Knopf: "Every woman will have to decide for herself whether she welcomes her new degree of independence or looks back with envy to the times when women were dependent on men. One thing seems sure to me: a woman who tries to have it both ways, who demands the advantages of independence, but capitulates her weakness whenever it suits her better, is going to find herself in serious difficulties."

All of which reminds me that when the late Marshal Pilsudski was confronted by the demand from Polish women for enfranchisement he told them, fairly enough, that if their demand were granted they could consider themselves liable for military service along with men. "YOUNG MAN."

Problems of Social Usage For Weddings

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:

THERE is some one I know in our church who sings beautifully and I would like to ask her to sing at my wedding. She has not sung professionally for years and I don't know whether I'm supposed to ask her her fee or give her a present.

Answer: I think that is a case where a friend in common would better act as go-between to find out whether she would be willing to sing, and if so, at what fee. If you can afford it, you agree, and send her a check (perhaps with a corset bouquet) just before the wedding. If she offers to sing for love, send her a present instead of a check.

Dear Mrs. Post: I was married secretly, although all my friends believe that I'm engaged, and the girls are asking to give showers for me. We have not been able to announce our marriage up until now, but I'm wondering whether it would perhaps be better to wait to announce until after these showers are over.

Answer: Since it is just as suitable to give showers for a bride as for a girl who is engaged, I would suggest sending the announcements before the shower invitations are given. And I think you ought to tell your nearest friends before these announcements are mailed, asking them to keep the secret until whatever time you are making the news public.

Dear Mrs. Post: If a woman marries for the first time, but this is the second marriage for her husband, would this fact prevent their sending announcements?

Answer: Not unless he is marrying very soon after the death of his first wife, or unless he has divorced his first wife in order to marry wife number two.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am over 60 and engaged to a widower almost 60. May we have my daughter, who is just 21, stand with us at the ceremony, and may my older brother give me away?

Answer: Yes, to both questions.

Dear Mrs. Post: We are a young married couple living in a small three-room apartment, which is too small anyway because most of the time my brother sleeps on the couch in the living room, as a paying visitor. Relatives have asked to stay with us because they cannot return home the same day. I would like to know how not to offend the latter?

Answer: Tell them that you would be delighted to have them stay with you, if you had room, but that John sleeps on the sofa in the sitting room, as it is.

OLD-TIME TROUPERS on RELIEF ROLLS HERE

They Appear for "Try-Outs" as Government Agencies Consider Means of Putting Them Back Behind Footlights

By Dorothy Coleman

Condé Camera Pictures by Arthur Witman

THE Federal Government is going into the show business. As one of its boondoggling activities under the Works Progress Administration it proposes to put to work on Government salaries thousands of performers who have previously earned their living in the theater and who have been on the relief rolls since last May. Applicants in St. Louis were a motley crew, including black-face comedians, vaudeville entertainers, stock company "straights," and an Indian fire-eater.

Fancy bag punching is the specialty of the Clark duo, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clark, who are known on the vaudeville stage as the Clark Trio, when their son works with them. Theirs is a novelty act, done at "Turkey in the Straw," or "Yankee Doodle," on an elaborate chromolium rigging. They keep 10 bright-colored bags going at once, using elbows, head and knees, and sometimes working blindfold. For variety Genevieve Clark may swing Indian clubs. "The only bag punching duo in the United States known to keep perfect rhythm," they boast. "Being a dumb-act, we usually open or close a bill. It's good for a finish, because it's a fast, noisy act." From the day he left a South Side gymnasium to punch a bag before a midway attraction at the World's Fair, Henry Clark has been a trouper. He traveled from coast to coast from Canada to Mexico with the big-top circuses. Once he was earning $150 a week with transportation paid. Now he is living in two back rooms on South Eighth street and keeping his hand in at bag punching on the second floor of a garage.

IRE-EATING is Bill Shores' particular stunt, although he says he's just as good at "Buddhist spiritual writings on blank paper, at working 'wild' with ropes, or singing the morning love call in Indian to the beat of a tom-tom." Bill's numerous stage aliases include "The Volcano Kid," used when he's programmed to juggle hot coals, chew hot sealing wax (he can't do this any more because a blow in the mouth while working on the River des Peres project has injured his gums), or spitting alcohol through his front teeth and lighting it from a blow torch held at some distance from his body. He is also known as Geake. That's when he works "wild," combing out his long black braids, and hooking a white ring in his nose, to do an imitation of a snake's rattle and hiss.

His most usual stage name is Chief Buffalo Mohawk, but as to what per cent Indian he is he will not commit himself. He has blue eyes and a skin which needs make-up for stage effects. Down on North Wharf street, where he has built a shack for his Swedish wife (he had another one once, and a daughter named Ruby May Shores) danced until she was ready to drop at concentration camps during the war, who never refused to do a benefit performance for any group, has applied for work on the national theater project.

"Smiles" Rodgers, who, with her husband, Billy Rodgers, used to headline burlesque houses, is going around from tavern to tavern, "picking up what floor money she can," for a song and dance. "After all," she volunteered, "it's nothing to the manager. I just come in, do my act, and go out when I finish. But when people don't even come in for a glass of beer, you can't

AGNES ALTON, the original Sis Hopkins of vaudeville, has the same wardrobe she has been using for 14 years in the theater. The black and white striped pin-ford has been replaced, but the red straw sailor hat with the absurd pheasant plume, the worn-out slippers and the starched lace pantaloons are the ones in which she has done her knock-kneed dance innumerable times. She has not even changed the tooth she blacks out to sing the comic song with which she made her biggest hit—"Ma, He's Makin' Eyes at Me." She has done the dance and sung the song on big-time circuits the country over, although St. Louis has always been her headquarters. At one time she had her own "14-people show." Then vaudeville circuits went the way of theater orchestras and local stock companies. Agnes Alton, who sang herself hoarse and

- a well-shaped head
- a fine, full chest
- strong back
- straight legs

All summer, the sun helps babies build sound bones and teeth. Sunshine provides the protective "Vitamin D" rays that babies need. But at this time of year, mothers cannot depend on the sun alone for protection. Not if they wish babies to have a well-developed framework and sound, beautifully even teeth.

They must furnish a more dependable source of the bone-and-tooth building factor regularly. Good cod liver oil! Given every day, good cod liver oil provides an abundance of Vitamin D. It also is rich in the factor which aids growth and helps build good general resistance—Vitamin A.

And because babies need plenty of both these factors regularly, many mothers buy a cod liver oil they know is rich in Vitamin A and D—Squibb's! Now available at any reliable drug store.

You'll find Squibb's vitamin-rich oil a real economy—Buy cod liver oil according to its vitamin content! The more vitamins, the more a bottle is worth. Many mothers always buy Squibb's. Then they are sure of full vitamin value for their money. It's so economical to use.

BABY BOND BONUS WINS IN HOUSE, 346 TO 58

Senate Amendment, Providing Method of Payment, Quickly Approved
Bill Is Delivered at the White House.

VOTES ENOUGH TO OVERRIDE A VETO

Cost Put at $2,500,000,000—Congressman Rich Provides Virtually Only Opposition in Perfunctory Debate.

By MAQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The bonus bill was delivered to the White House today after the House concurred in the Senate's proposal to pay the veterans in baby bonds. Administration leaders assured the House that the measure would be passed over the President's veto should it be vetoed.

The vote in the House on concurrence with the Senate plan was 346 for the bonus bill as amended and 58 opposed.

The House had already passed the bill, by a vote of 356 to 58. As in the earlier vote only a handful of members, almost equally divided between Republicans and Democrats, voted against the bonus among them as on the earlier vote, was Representative Claiborne (Dem.) of St. Louis, the only member of the Missouri delegation in opposition.

Snell Against Bonus.
The Republican floor leader, Representative Snell of New York, voted against the bonus and many Republicans from New York and Massachusetts followed his lead.

The bonus bill as sent to the White House provides for payment of the full face value of the adjusted service certificates in bonds of $50 denomination except in instances where the amount due is less than $50.

It has been estimated to cost up to $2,500,000,000 although sponsors of the measure have insisted that many veterans will hold their bonds as investments.

After June 15, 1937, the bonds will draw interest at 3 per cent.

Bonus Forces' Control Complete.
The action today was taken under unanimous consent of the House with bonus forces representing veterans' lobbies, in full control. An hour of perfunctory debate was given over chiefly to members who were desirous of getting pro-bonus speeches into the record.

Democrats and Republicans vied with each other for credit for passage of the bill. Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep.), New York, in replying to Democrats, pointed out that a Republican majority in a previous session had passed a bonus bill over the presidential veto.

All speakers in the hour of debate took it for granted that the House and Senate would pass the measure over President Roosevelt's veto. The general view was that the President would almost certainly turn it down.

Congressman Rich Assails Bill.
Virtually the only voice raised in opposition in the House today was Representative Rich (Rep.), Pennsylvania, who said that the German bond that, he said, was worth only 24 cents during the German inflation, he warned the same thing would happen to American bonds and money.

"This," he said, holding a $100 bill up before the House will be worth 24 cents, too."

The bonus payment at this time gives each holder of a $1000 adjusted bond of $338, Rich said.

"Our country is in the greatest danger, morally and financially, that it has ever been in, in its entire history," Rich declared.

Cries of "Vote, vote," and jeers from the Democratic side greeted this remark.

Both Representatives Vinson and McCormack, sponsors of the bonus bill, spoke in its praise. Vinson told the House that the Veterans' organization—the united front—wanted the greatest favorable vote that could possibly be mustered.

Snell Interrupts Vinson.
"What is the fundamental difference," Representative Snell, Republican floor leader, demanded of Vinson.
